Library tax levy set at $893,695

The Arlington Heights Memorial Library board has adopted a 1975 tax levy of $893,695.

Roland Ley, board treasurer, said the levy is based on a proposed 1976-77 cash budget totaling $1,116,515. He said the levy is in "excess of what is permitted" by the maximum tax rate of 23 cents per $100 assessed valuation.

Ley said the tax rate would have to increase by about 6 cents to provide the necessary revenue for the proposed budget. The board is planning to ask for a tax increase in an upcoming referendum although no date has been set.

The proposed budget includes $150,000 for possible purchase of a computer system; $45,000 for purchase of additional books and $19,000 for new employes.

Ley said the budget also reflects a 15 per cent increase "in areas we think there may be an inflationary effect" and a 13 per cent salary increase for most full-time employes. He said the levy may "be on the high side" but noted that the board will have a better idea of expenses when it approves a 1976-77 budget in February.

Ley said if the board is limited to the 23-cent tax rate "we will have to tighten up on discretionary items" such as the computer system and employe salaries.

End seen to impasse in school pact talks

by MARILYN McDONALD

Board members and teachers in Prospect Heights Dist. 23 are optimistic about ending an impasse in contract ntgotiations that has stalled talks since July 17.

Teachers and board members met Wednesday and Thursday to discuss why talks broke down. Negotiations broke off July 17 after board members made counter proposals on pay for extra duty, summer school and merit, but teachers made no new concessions.

Kenneth Bates, spokesman for the teacher union, said he thought both sessions this week went well.

"They felt we didn't exchange a counterproposal with them, when we didn't think we had to. Much of what they wanted would have come from negotiating, give and take," Bates said.

"I would expect we'll pick up where we left off on Thursday," said Bates.

VINCENT BATTAGLIA, board member and spokesmen for the board negotiating team, said the two sides may go to mediation depending "on the sum and substance of both packages" offered by the groups. What is offered by the teachers "may be substantial or it may not be enough," he said.

Battaglia said that the feeling at both sessions this week was good.

"The board was positive and I think the teachers were too," he said.

Board members and teachers have been negotiating since Feb. 19. They are working on salary items for the second year of a two-year contract.

AMONG THEIR salary requests, teachers have asked for $60,000 in merit and across-the-board raises. In its last proposal, board members offered $40,000 for merit and across-the-board raises. Teachers wanted a 15 per cent increase in extra duty pay, and the board last offered a 10 per cent increase. Teachers also asked for a 15 per cent hike in summer school pay, but board members last offered a 10 per cent hike.

Teachers and board members will meet again Thursday to decide whether they can proceed with normal negotiations or if they must call in a mediator to settle the dispute.

2 compete in Buffalo Grove pageant

Two Arlington Heights girls will compete tonight for the Miss Buffalo Grove title beginning at 8 at Buffalo Grove High School, Arlington Heights and Dundee roads.

Gerry Ann Ribano, 18, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Bibano, 506 Hintz Rd., and Virginia Marie Vrenios, 16, of 710 W. Burr Oak Dr.,

will compete with eight other girls in swimsuit, talent and evening gown categories.

Miss Ribano, a graduate of Wheeling High School, plans to perform a dance number for the talent competition.

A senior at Buffalo Grove High School, Miss Vrenios also will present a dance performance.

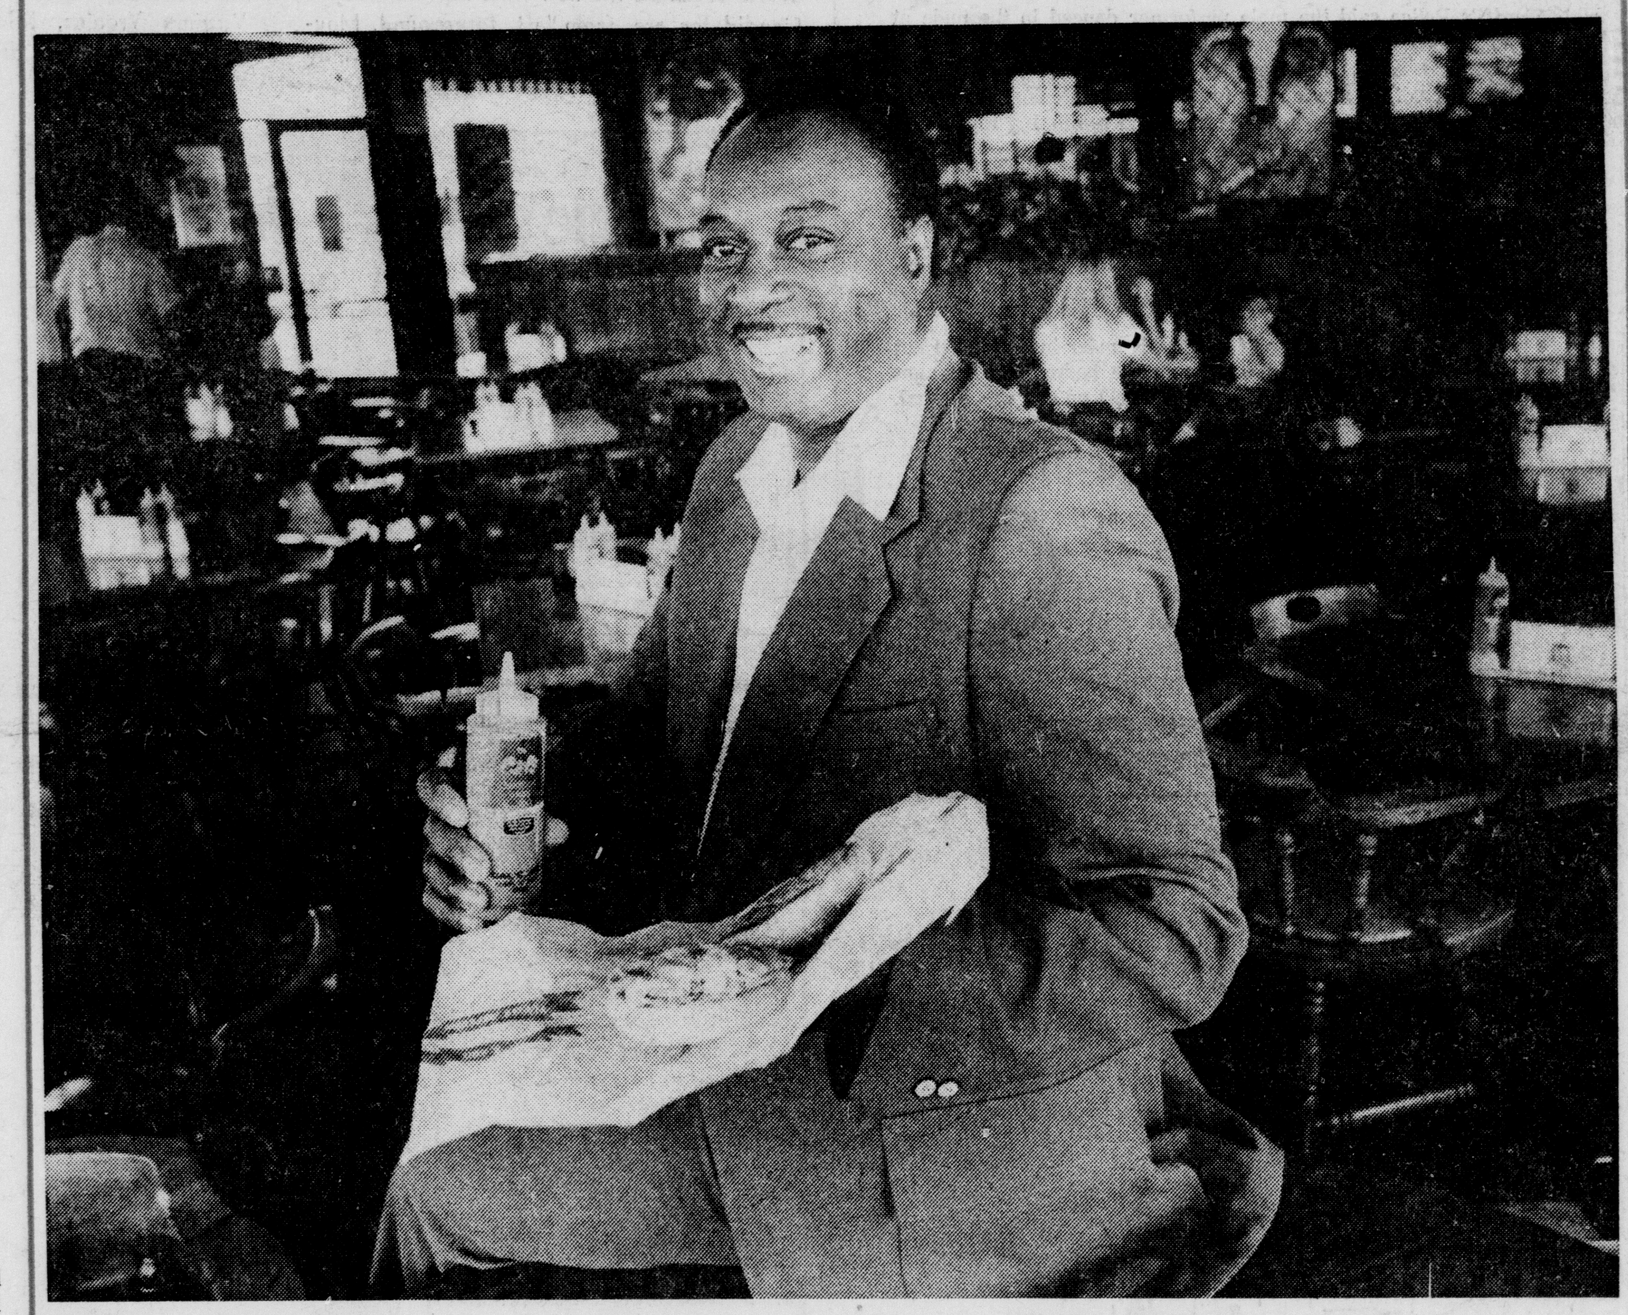

Girls living in the nothern section of Arlington Heights, parts of Wheeling and Prairie View were eligible to compete.

The new queen will receive a $300 cash prize from the Buffalo Grove Jaycees, sponsor of the contest and will go on to next year's Miss Illinois contest.

Tickets for the pageant are $2.50 each and may be purchased at the door.

A WINNING SMILE and a tasty sandwich are his stock in trade: Arnie Yarber is coming to town as Cal's Inc.'s answer to the fried chicken promoter, Col. Harlan Sanders. Arnie's special barbecue sauce is a spicy concoction developed by his grandmother.

One porkburger to go?

Roast beef-chicken-ham syndrome faces opposition

Saturday

by LEA TONKIN

Take note of Arnie Yarber's pearly white teeth. Get a load of his dimples.

You're likely to see more of Arnie's happy face. The man from Champaign, who says all he knows is how to put together a tasty pork sandwich, is coming to town as Cal's Inc.'s answer to the chicken and ribs promoter, Col. Harlan Sanders.

He may not wear a flashy shirt, and he doesn't sport a goatee. But Arnie can turn on a make-yourself-at-home welcome guaranteed to get people smiling right back. He's just the man to put some personality into the plastic world of fast-food restaurants.

Soon, customers of Cal's Roast Beef outlets will find life-size cardboard mannequins of Arnie imploring them to break away from the traditional roast beef or ham and cheese.

SMALL DISPLAY cards at each table will feature a capsule account of Arnie's life and the sandwiches that may soon make him famous.

In Champaign, Arnie is already famous for those pork sandwiches, featured at his Po' C.Q. Boys' restaurant. The sauce recipe was handed down from his grandmother. It tastes . . . well, when Arnie offers you a sandwich, he'll tell you about it.

"Go ahead and lick your fingers," he says, as the spicy, penetrating concoction ozzes from the hot sliced pork mounded on the sandwich. "It's all right. It tastes so good. Besides, you won't want to waste a scrap of food."

His grandmother, Martha Carr, used to prepare the sauce to help assure that none of her family's meals went uneaten.

"IT DATES BACK to a time when Negro families had very little to eat," Arnie says. "They needed to feed all those kids, so they needed food that tasted good."

Arnie watches his grandmother mix the sauce, a combination of corn oil, spices and other ingredients that is unusual because of its noncatsup base. He kept the recipe and the sauce is now one of the drawing cards at his restaurant. "It goes with pork like black and white."

Arnie has been dishing out food and conversation at his restaurant in Champaign for 25 years. "I just love people," he says. "My wife says I'd talk to a sign if it would say something back. I like people, I really do. And I remember them, too."

The former students who were regular customers during their stay at the University of Illinois are people he especially likes to remember. Mention an Illinois town and he can reel off the names of its sons and daughters who attended the U. of I. He can recall who was going steady with whom and likes to talk about how the girls favored his barbecue sauce.

IT WAS MEMORIES of Arnie and a pretty good pork sandwich that brought former U. of I students Richard Blankenship and Jim Griggs back to Champaign. They're the owners of the West Dundee-based Cal's Inc. The company businesses range from Cal's Road Beef restaurants to Chicken City U.S.A., pizza restaurants in Central America and planned construction of a St. Charles shopping center.

Arnie's promotional activities, including guest appearances at Cal's Stores in Schaumburg and other locations, will be sandwiched between management responsibilities at his own restaurant.

Owner nabbed after man dances nude

Sheriff's Police arrested the coowner of the Upstairs Lounge in the Dolphin Motel, 8550 Golf Rd., Maine Township, this week, charging that a nude man danced Aug. 8 as part of the entertainment at the lounge.

The owner, Kathy Cardamon, 30, of 650 Murray Ln., Des Plaines, was charged with violating the county's new ordinance banning nude dancing in bars in unincorporated areas. She will appear Sept. 10 in the Niles branch of Circuit Court.

Sheriff's Police said the male performer danced in the nude at the lounge while customers were drinking alcoholic beverages.

The man, who was not arrested, started his dance wearing a black T-shirt with a star on the front and a lightening bolt on the back, a large white sphere on his head and swimming flippers on his feet.

Fire damages convent

Fire caused an estimated $1,800 damage to an upstairs bedroom at St. Emily's Convent, 120 N. Stratton Ln., Mount Prospect Friday afternoon.

Fire officials said the cause of the fire is under investigation but that it apparently started in a desk in the bedroom. Five nuns were in the convent at the time of the fire, but no one was injured.

Agreement on well financing?

Tentative agreement was reached Friday on the financing of an estimated $1.5 million well and reservoir on the Plum Grove Hills development near Harper College.

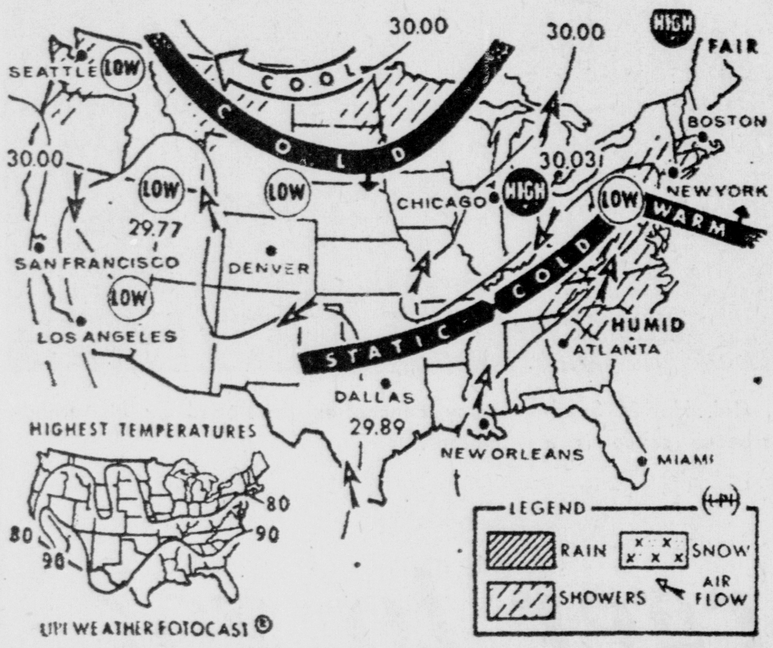

L. F. Draper and Associates, developers of the 365-acres, tentatively have agreed to pay an undisclosed amount of money to the Village of Palatine for each of the proposed 1,873 dwelling units at the time building permits are issued.

Specific details about the agreement are being withheld until a formal agreement has been drafted by the attorneys for the village and developer.

Little acquitted in icepick slaying

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — A jury of six blacks and six whites took an hour and 21 minutes Friday to decide that Joan Little killed jailer Clarence Alligood when he abused her sexually and found her innocent of his murder.

"A woman has a right to defend herself," the foreman of the jury, Mark Neilson, said.

The 21-year-old black woman's acquittal touched off rejoicing in all the militant camps that supported her — blacks, feminists and prison reformers.

She was accused of murdering the 62-year-old white jailer in a plot to escape the Beaufort County Jail in Washington, N.C., but she contended in sob-wracked testimony that she stabbtd Alligood 11 times with an icepick when he forced her into an oral sex act.

"Freedom feels good," said the diminutive defendant when she left the Wake County courthouse.

The leader of her half-dozen attorneys, voluble, "old country boy" Jerry Paul, 33, promptly lost his freedom upon winning her acquittal. After the jury returned its verdict, Superior Court Judge Hamilton C. Hobgood summoned Paul, who calls himself a "new abolitionist," to the bench and sentenced him to 14 days in jail for contempt of court.

Miss Little dropped her head when the verdict was announced and put a handkerchief to her face.

Alligood's 62-year-old widow, Elsie, contacted in Washington, N.C., said "I might think of a lot of things, but I don't want to say nothing. We all have feelings, and that's all I can say."

Nielsen, a white 26-year-old stereo salesman, said the jurors sat down in a circle and each of them discussed his feelings about the case, which were that she was not guilty, and then a formal vote was taken.

"I tried to maintain a suspicious attitude about what they said," Nielson said, referring to the testimony. "Her story was a logical one, and the pieces fit."

Alligood's body, nude from the waist down, was found in Miss Little's cell and perhaps the most telling piece of evidence was semen found on his thigh.

The defense introduced several other female prisoners of the jail to tell of Alligood's sexual advances, but Miss Little's testimony, which ran for two days, was the bulk of their case. She claimed Alligood entered her cell with the icepick and forced her to perform oral sex on him. In the midst of the act, she said, she grabbed the icepick and began hacking at him.

She grabbed her clothes and fled the jail, she said, and last saw Alligood upright, bleeding, but staring at her with a "silly-looking grin."

RUSSELL MacDONALD, Joan Little's bodyguard, yells for assistance in keeping Ms. Little's path clear as they leave court Friday after she was acquitted of second-degree murder charges.

Hoffa probably dead: top lawman

DETROIT (UPI) — The head of the Michigan State Police Friday became the first top law enforcement officer to say on the record what many have voiced in private — James R. Hoffa has been killed.

Meanwhile, a psychiatrist who, through drug-induced hypnosis, dug out the names of persons Hoffa said he planned to meet on his last rendezvous July 30, said the missing Teamsters leader revealed himself as "worried and uptight" — perhaps sending out an unconscious signal for help — a few hours before his disappearance.

Michigan State Police Director George L. Halvorson told reporters in East Lansing,Mich., "Too much time has lapsed . . . I'd have to believe from the kind of lifestyle he lived that he would have gotten in touch with his family.

"The complete absence of any contact would have me believe that he is not alive."

Halverson indicated he fears the 16-day-old mystery of the ex-Teamster president's disappearance may never be solved.

"This is going to go as an unsettled account," he said.

Dr. Bruce L. Danto, director of Detroit's Suicide and Drug Prevention Center, told how, at the behest of a representative of the Hoffa family, he used the drug brevital sodium to hypnotize and question four of the last persons known to have seen Hoffa alive.

Under hypnosis, he said, the witnesses said Hoffa perhaps was seeking "unconscious protection" when he mentioned the names of a reputed Mafia don and a Teamsters rival as among the men he planned to meet at the Machus Red Fox Restaurant in Bloomfield Township.

Danto said most of the four persons in a conscious state remembered Hoffa told them he expected to meet Detroit Mafia don Anthony "Tony Jack" Giacalone.

But he said it was only under hypnosis that three recalled Hoffa mentioning the name "Tony Pro" — Anthony Provenzano, an East Coast Teamsters boss with whom Hoffa reportedly had a falling out.

Danto said two recalled the name "Lenny," believed to be that of Leonard Schultz, Detroit labor consultant and another longtime Hoffa associate.

Portugal weekend coup by armed forces hinted

LISBON, PORTUGAL (UPI) — A leading newspaper said Friday there could be a weekend coup in Portugal stemming from growing opposition to the nation's pro-Communist prime minister among commanders of the armed forces.

"Unconfirmed rumors are circulating of a possible coup attempt that could come from the left or the right to clear up the situation," the weekly newspaper Expresso said.

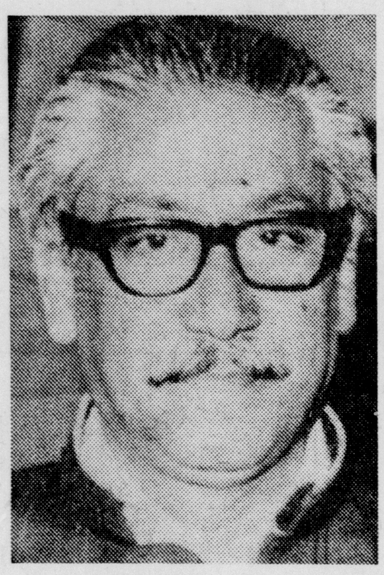

It said the reports were based on a series of coded messages picked up on amateur radio frequencies, which mentioned this weekend.

The last time Expresso reported such a rumor was in its March 8 edition. On March 11, an abortive right-wing military coup led the army's leftist faction to take full control of the government.

Military sources said they were not aware any such move was imminent, but agreed that tension within the armed forces was becoming critical.

They quoted Col. Jaime Neves as saying that fighting would break out within a week unless Prime Minister Vasco Goncalves stepped down. Neves, who has been under attack from the Communists and the extreme left, commands 850 commandos stationed on the outskirts of the capital.

The political maneuvering continued despite a national religious holiday. Many Portuguese left the capital for a long weekend on the beaches and in the countryside.

MUJIBUR RAHMAN

200 killed in bloody coup

New Bangladesh leaders installed

NEW DELHI (UPI) — A rightist lawyer was sworn in as president of Bangladesh Friday after rebellious military men killed Sheikh Mujibur Rahman, two of his nephews and Prime Minister Mansoor Ali in a swift coup. The revolt touched off a bloodbath among Mujibur's followers, border reports said.

The new regime imposed martial law and a 24-hour curfew, but the news agency Press Trust of India, reporting from the border village of Agartala, said at least 200 of the Sheikh's followers were killed in rioting that followed announcement of the coup.

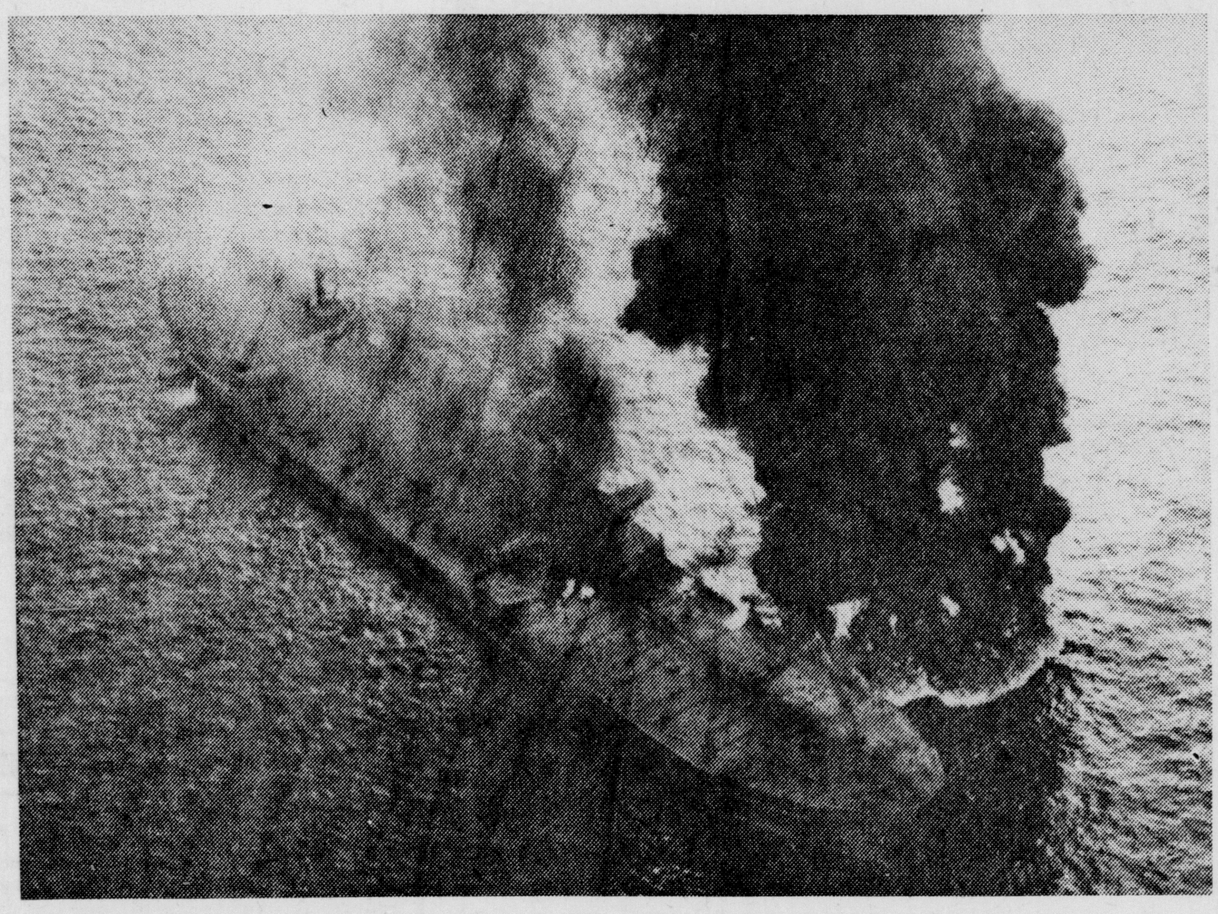

Broadcasts from the Bangladesh capital of Dacca said Mujibur, 55-year-old founder of Bangladesh, was shot to death in his room in the presidential palace by his own bodyguards early Friday because of his inability to solve the staggering problems of one of the poorest countries in the world.

They said Commerce and Foreign Trade Minister Khondakkar Mushtaque Ahmed, 56, was sworn in as president by acting Chief Justice Mohammed Hussain.

The official name of Bangladesh was changed from "People's Republic" to "Islamic Republic," an indication of a possible swing away from previous extreme socialist policies.

But the new president said over Bangladesh radio that his government would strictly follow the nonaligned foreign policy of his predecessor.

Indian police sources in Calcutta said the Indo-Bangladesh border had been sealed off and Dacca airport closed to international traffic.

THE BRITISH TANKER Globtik roars in flames after a collision early Friday with an unmanned oil platform 100 miles south of Lake Charles, La., in the Gulf of Mexico. All 46 crewmen abandoned the ship, but five were missing. The crash formed a two-mile oil slick. The ship was en route to Exxon refineries in Baytown, Texas.

Ford to veto extension of oil cost curbs

VAIL, Colo. (UPI) — President Ford said Friday he will move to decontrol prices on domestic oil and eliminate the tariff on imported fuel — costing consumers a few cents a gallon more but promoting a more efficient use of dwindling energy resources.

In a speech and a brief question-and-answer session after a speech to an energy symposium here, Ford told some 1,100 delegates that "we are running out of time" to meet a new energy crisis.

"The on-again, off-again congressional approach to energy is hazardous, expensive and frightening," he said.

He referred to Congress' refusal to pass his compromise offer for gradual lifting of domestic oil price controls over a 39-month period and its subsequent vote to extend present controls for another six months.

Ford has been expected to veto the extension, and he confirmed that intention Friday: "Approval of this extension would mean only more months of delay without the critically needed incentives to promote conservation and spur new domestic oil production," he said.

A White House aide said the President is "hopeful" his veto will be sustained in the Senate but added, "We recognize it will be close."

Ford spoke at The Eagle's Nest, a dining room and reception hall atop the 11,000 foot high Vail Mountain.

He rode a ski lift gondola with huge windows up and down the mountain, taking advantage of a sunny, cloudless day to enjoy the views. Shortly after returning to his vacation chalet, he headed to the local public course for his fifth round of golf in as many days.

The President summed up his philosophy on energy in his prepared remarks:

"Painful as they are, higher prices to promote conservation and higher prices do produce increased efficiency in the use of petroleum products. Cheap energy encourages waste and preserves inefficient energy technology. When the price of energy reflects its value to society, as determined by the market price, there will be an incentive to stop squandering it and develop advanced technologies, such as solar energy."

Chicagoan breaks his dad's English Channel swim mark

• Jon Erikson of Chicago completed a two-way swim of the English Channel in 30 hours Friday, breaking by three minutes the 10-year-old record held by his father. The 20-year-old physical education student overcame jellyfish bites, bad tides, fog and even ocean liners to complete the England-France-England distance of 42 miles. One of the first things he did after getting out of the chilly water was to telephone his father, Ted, to break the news. "I was confident," he said. "I thought I would do it in about 24 to 27 hours, and when we went over from England to France, we were pretty much on schedule, just undtr 12 hours. Ask Andy

Dinosaurs--Are they still with us?

Andy sends a complete 20-volume set of the Merit Students Encyclopedia to Luc Seguin, 13, of Ottawa, Ont., Canada, for his question: WHAT REALLY BROUGHT AN END TO THE DINOSAURS?

This popular question must be tackled again and again because we have no provable answer. Naturally, this challenges researchers to seek for more evidence. The latest theory on the departure of the dinosaurs is the most fascinating — because it suggests the possibility of a happy ending.

We have been told that the dinosaurs were scaly coldblooded reptiles that ruled the world for more than 100 million years and became extinct about 60 million years ago. A brand-new theory, based on a wealth of believable evidence, is that many of those prehistoric animals were warm-blooded and had hair or feathers.

ONE OF THE basic clues is the fact that warmblooded animals need far more food. After all, a lot of extra energy is needed to operate the biological thermostat that converts food into controlled body warmth. This calls for more elaborate blood factories within the bones. For example, the internal bone structure of a cat is far more complex than that of a lizard.

With this idea in mind, researchers took a new look at the old bones of the dinosaurs. And sure enough, many of them had the warmblooded structure that enabled them to convert food into body heat. Other evidence indicates that these had much bigger appetites than their coldblooded cousins.

There is fossil evidence that the ancestral birds which appeared during the dinosaur days had feathers instead of scales. It seems likely that other early warmblooded animals had hair.

This huge package of scholarly evidence indicates that the animals of the so-called Age of Reptiles were far more varied than we had supposed. Some 300 million years ago, many types already had made the biological changes that appear in the following Age of Mammals. Perhaps it is time to reclassify the old-timers in groups of ancestral types of birds, reptiles and mammals.

THIS NEW POINT of view wipes out the old idea that a world full of dinosaur populations suddenly became extinct. Perhaps they merly changed to keep up with the times.

The old theory of the dinosaur extinction seemed such a tragic story. It is nice to think that maybe this did not happen at all. Perhaps at least some of them changed through countless generations. And maybe some of their descendants gave rise to the remote ancestors of many of our modern animals.

Andy sends a 7-volume set of the Chronicles of Narnia to Martin Jernigan, age 11, of Montgomery, Ala., for his question. WHICH IS THE BIGGEST MEAT-EATING ANIMAL?

The animals that live mostly on meat are called carnivores, and the biggest ones live in the sea. They are the enormous whales. The rorqual, alias the finner whale, is a balleen whale who dines on small items such as krill and herring. He may be 82 feet long and weigh 70 tons, which should make him the largest of all the m e a t-eaters. The toothy, 60-foot sperm whale devours huge helpings of squid and cuttlefish.

On land, the largest carnivores are the big bears, though all of them include some greenery and perhaps fruit in their diets. Some people rate the brown Kodiak bear as the biggest land carnivore. He is 9 feet long and weighs up to 1,600 pounds. The 9-foot polar bear eats more meat but, though 9 feet long, he weighs much less than the big brown bear.

Pork sandwiches go commercial . . .

He may be featured in television commercials later in the year. Customers at area food stores may get a first-hand sample of Arnie's Col. Sanders routine when he dishes out free samples and goodwill as part of a retail campaign in 90 days. It's all part of a long-term agreement with the Cal's Inc., management.

There's more than money and slick publicity in the new venture, Arnie insists. Whether he's traveling to promote the company or turning out sandwiches at his Po' Boys' restaurant, the genial restauranteur takes time to enjoy his favorite hobby — people.

He watches with satisfaction as a customer munches a sauced-up sandwich, savoring the moment. It is the kind of pleasure that comes from knowing you're doing a good thing, Arnie says. "I make the sandwich. I put the sauce on. That's all I know how to do."

Review course for secretaries set at Harper

Harper College will offer a review course this fall for secretaries who are planning to take the Certified Professional Secretary examination in May.

Classes will be Tuesdays Aug. 26 through Dec. 16 from 8 to 9:50 p.m.

During the fall semester the course will review three of the six sections of the CPS examination. The other three parts will be covered in the spring semester.

Tuition is $28 per semester for residents of the Harper district and $62.44 for those out of district.

Further information is available from the Harper education office.

Saturday's Answer

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE – Here's how to work it:

A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

The O'Hare terminal— emotional kaleidoscope...

A terminal means the beginning and the end. Last stop or departure point. End of the line or long goodbye. And so it is at O'Hare's International Terminal, a place where flights across the world begin and end.

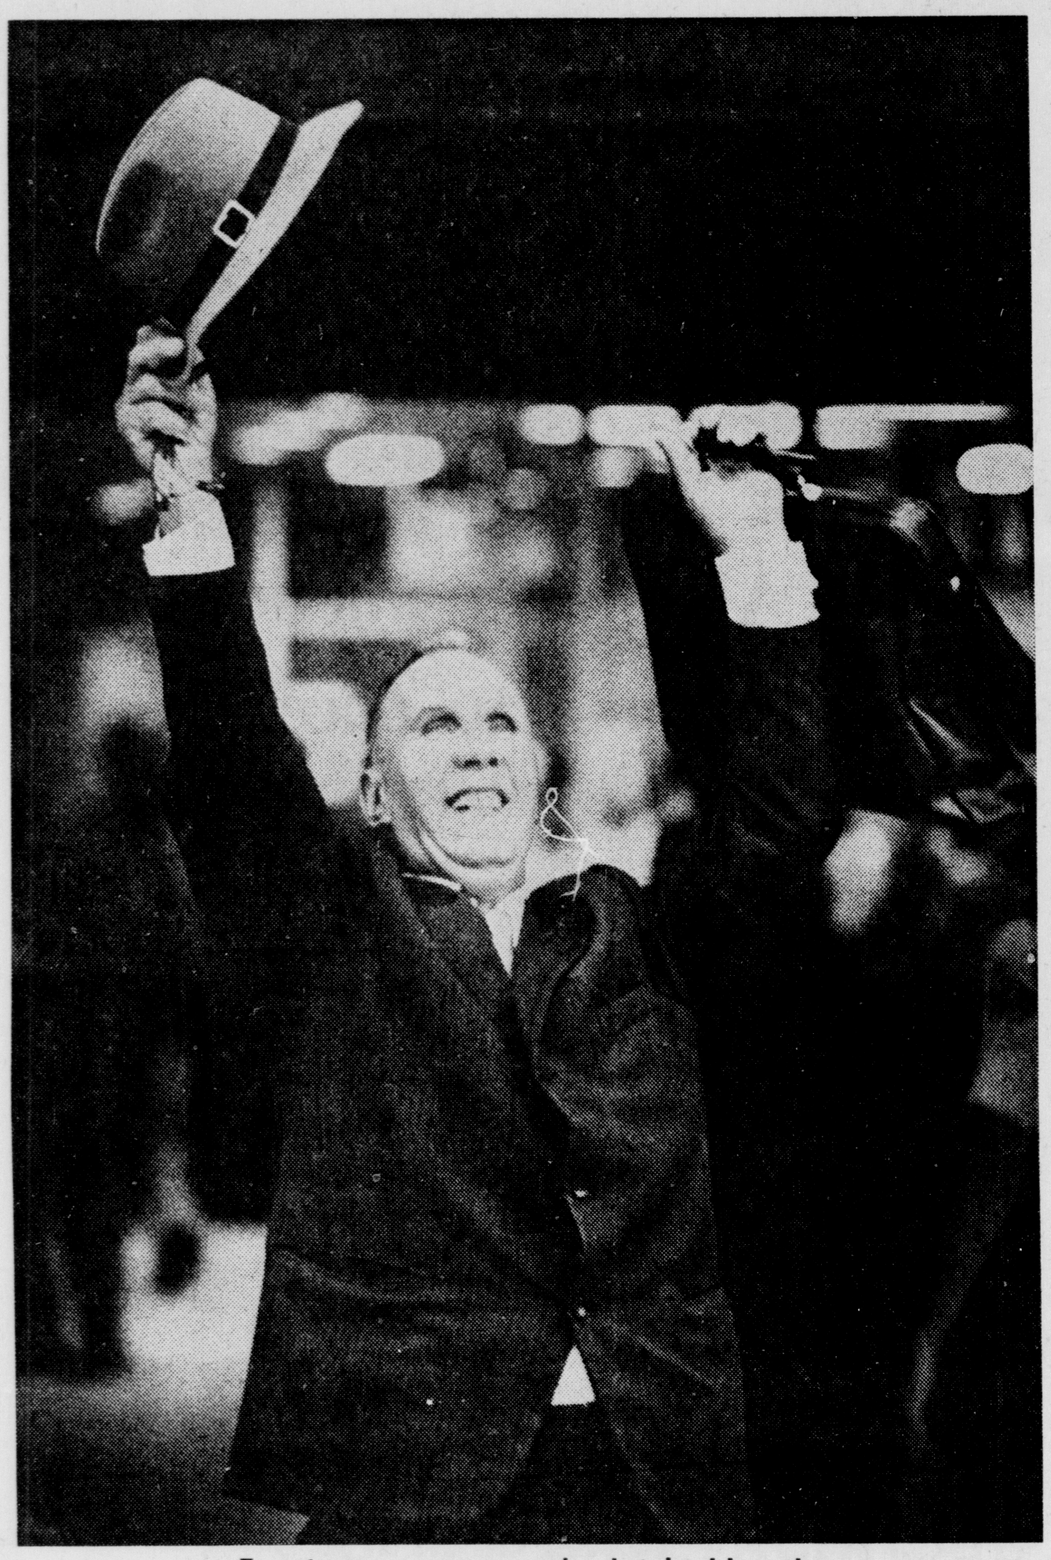

You can see open emotions here on the faces of the people who shuttle through on their way to somewhere; happiness and freedom, sorrow and farewell.

Look first at the happy faces. A family of Pakistanis reunited; a proper German gentleman waving his hat in exuberance. As the crowd moves up the airplane ramp, a woman steps aside to wave a bright goodby — or au revoir.

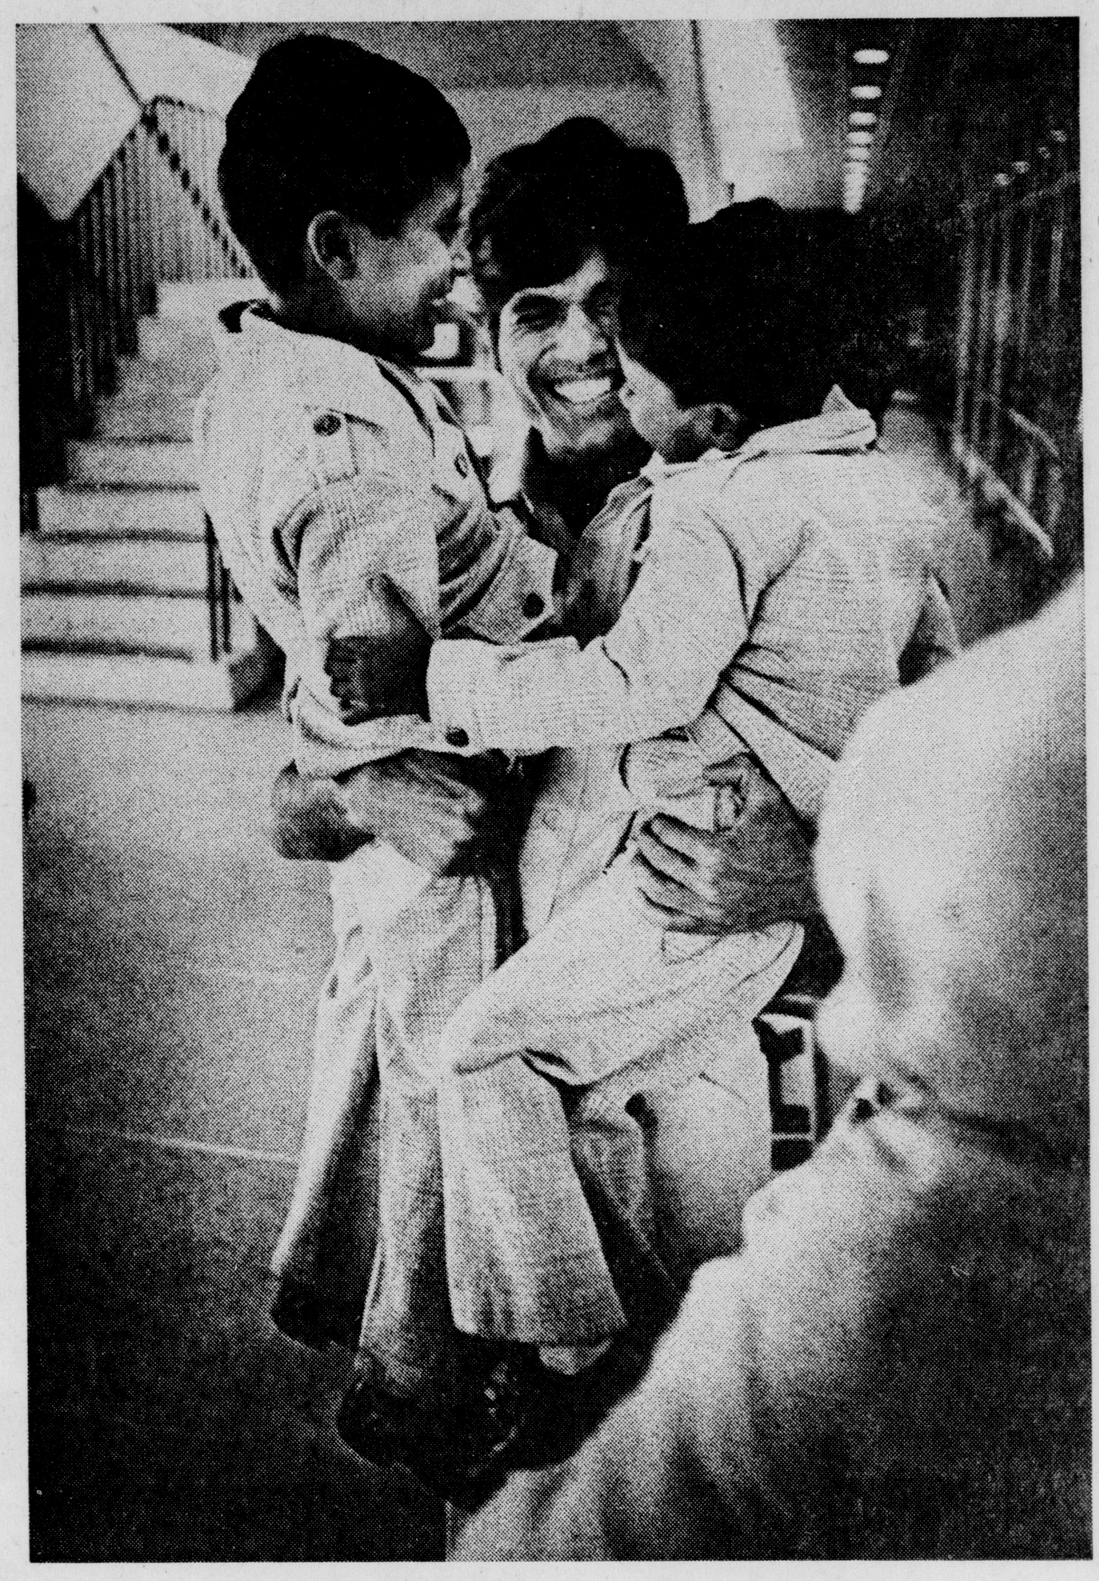

The terminal is a receptacle for dramatic moments, times in people's lives that mark the end or the beginning of something strong. A little girl leans near the window, sobbing when a special person leaves. A woman dressed in black returns from her native Yugoslavia where she attended the funeral of a relative. Strong moments for the family and the bystander.

Look into the eyes of these people. And remember your own hellos and goodbyes.

Emotions as open as the bright blue sky.

Reunited, miles between them reduced to inches.

Two goodbyes...one cheerful...

...one heartbreaking.

The concrete starkness of O'Hare's International Terminal tells little about the river of emotions which passes through its corridors each day.

Every day there is tenderness, laughter and sadness told in a dozen languages and a thousand foreign gestures.

It is a universal land inside the limits of the airport, a place where families come together or part and where a final glimpse of someone must last until the next visit — or forever.

A summer auction -- from A to Zucchini

WHEN YOU GO to an auction, you might expect to bid on treasures or even trash, but leave it to the Palatine Homemaker Unit to offer homegrown vegetables such as the huge zucchini squash donated by Mrs. Agnes Berghorn. With the shortage of canning jars and lids, homemade pickled beets and sweet chunk pickles brought by Mrs. Evelyn Bartz returned a handsome price. The Homemakers held the auction following their annual picnic Tuesday at the Winston Park home of Mrs. Charles Lindberg. At left above, members and guests help themselves to the tasty-looking selection of homemade potluck dishes.

Newlyweds met at Harper dance

It was at a dance at Harper College three years ago that Gail MacEachron and Ivor W. Jeffreys first met, and on July 27 they were married in Prince of Peace Lutheran Church, Hoffman Estates.

Gail, daughter of the Scott MacEachrons, Schaumburg, is a graduate of Conant High and received an associate of arts degree from Harper. She is employed at Sears, Roebuck & Co., Woodfield. Ivor, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lyman T. Jeffreys, Mount Prospect, is an armed services veteran and employed in Chicago by Sheldon Machine Corp.

Mr. and Mrs. Ivor W. Jeffreys

THE 4 P.M service was both candlelight and double ring with Gail wearing a dotted swiss gown trimmed in Cluny lace. Gail made her own veil, trimming it in the same lace. A matching lace headpiece and a bouquet of white carnations, stephanotis and baby's breath completed her ensemble.

Her sister, Carol Eckrosh, Mount Prospect, was matron of honor, and Patricia Thomas, Schaumburg, and the groom's sister, Elizabeth, Mount Prospect, were bridesmaids. The girls made their own gowns of white-flocked blue chambray with white eyelet lace trim. They also wore white organdy picture hats and carried white daisy mums, red carnations, blue cornflowers and baby's breath in white baskets.

ERIC MURGATROYD, Palatine, was best man, and groomsmen were the couple's brothers, Scott MacEachron and Raymond Jeffreys. Ushers were their brothers, William Jeffreys and Bruce MacEachron.

A reception for 115 guests was held at the Casa Royale in Des Plaines, after which the newlyweds honeymooned at the Playboy Towers and at a Wisconsin cottage. They are now making their home in a Hoffman Estates apartment.

Pressing fresh flowers done with paper, books

The homeline
by Dorothy Ritz

Dear Dorothy: Once again I've got an urge to press some of my lovely flowers — to frame them and have a reminder all winter. Can this be done without a plant press? Also, since there's such a range in flowers, do you know which ones press best? — Jennifer Cheney

Don't worry about a plant press. You can get excellent results just using layers of absorbent paper and a book and then adding weights. Pick the flowers in the afternoon when they contain the least moisture. Place them face down about an inch apart between layers of absorbent paper. Store them in a spot with good circulation — and remember that the heavier the weighting, the sooner the drying out. It takes about two weeks for thorough drying.

The thin plants do best because the multipetals like zinnias and marigolds will not lie evenly under glass when framed. Those that do well are pansies, daisies, phlox, petunias and that popular weed — Queen Anne's lace. Velveteen makes the perfect background in framing as its pile adapts to pressed plants of varying thickness.

Of the many I've seen, Queen Anne's lace on black velveteen has been the real eye-catcher.

Dear Dorothy: We have an old waffle iron which we pull out from time to time. The waffles come out perfectly, but the grills are so dark brown they need cleaning. What do I use? —Helene Embree

Forget it. If the waffles are good, count your blessings. Just wipe out the iron with a paper towel and wrap up the iron in an old sheet to keep the dust out.

Dear Dorothy: Seems to me people don't thank you enough for the great tips. My own hearty thanks to the reader who said you CAN freeze cream cheese. Bought a package on sale several weeks back and froze it. Thawed in the refrigerator, it was A-1. —Mrs. Thomas Neuer

Dear Dorothy: I've been wanting to try a recipe given me for chocolate mousse. I hesitate because it seems like such a waste to buy a can of Dutch-process cocoa just for this one dessert. Can't I just use regular cocoa along with the standard chocolate? Or maybe just use bittersweet chocolate? —Caroline Schaeffer Depends on what you want a mousse to be. I'm one of those who drools over the thought of a good chocolate mousse and heaven only knows how many I've tried — many a good one without Dutch-process cocoa. But, in truth, the ones that knock you for a loop do contain the Dutch cocoa, which is treated with an alkali action that gives it a darker color and deeper, richer taste.

Happenings

Tea, open house

To celebrate the beginning of its 15th year, Schaumburg Woman's Club is hosting a tea and open house Wednesday at 8 p.m. for members and area women interested in membership. The event will be held at Christ the King Lutheran Church, corner of Walnut Lane and Schaumburg Road.

The club offers a diversified program of service, social and philanthropic activities undertaken primarily within the village and township. In the past 14 years the women have also contributed a total of $27,000 to General Federation of Women's Clubs projects.

Information on the open house is available from Sharon Ward, 894-6490.

Juniors' coffee

The Junior Women's Club of Palatine will host a coffee next to the pool at Palatine Community Park Wednesday from 10 a.m. to noon. Women interested in the group are invited to get acquainted with its services, social events and fund-raising projects.

The Juniors have been helping local organizations such as the Well Baby Clinic, nursing homes, Fish and the Day Care Center since 1941.

Babysitters will be at the park Wednesday to care for small children. In case of rain, the coffee will be moved into the clubhouse adjacent to the pool. Community Park is located on Palatine Road at Northwest Highway. Janis Morrisroe, 358-7509, has further information.

You, too, can be a publicity pro

Anyone attending one of The Herald's publicity workshops can become a pro in preparing news releases. All the do's and don'ts, the how-to's and why for's will be covered in three workshops Thursday, Sept. 4, in Woodfield's Community Room, Schaumburg.

Presidents and publicity chairmen of all area women's organizations whose news appears exclusively in the Suburban Living pages of The Heralds are invited to any one of the three.

The workshops will be held from 9:15 to 11 a.m.; 1:15 to 3 p.m.; and 7:15 to 9 p.m. Sessions will be informal with coffee and rolls whenever you feel thirsty or hungry. So there will be enough chairs and beverage for all, reservations are requested. The number to call is 394-2300, extension 276.

Kewpie Doll Country a nice place to visit

We headed for Branson, Mo, a few weeks ago, in order to meet our kids from Kansas "half way" and to give the fishermen in the family a go at the speckled trout in Lake Taneycomo.

We stayed at a resort just a mile or so from The School of the Ozarks, a "self-help" liberal arts college at Point Lookout, near Branson. The school was founded in 1906, and here full-time boarding students gain an education while participating in the work program which operates the school and its many work and craft programs. We were told students must demonstrate financial need, academic ability and a willingness to work!

THE CAMPUS is a delightful place, with two good restaurants for the public, a fine museum, theater, craft shops, working water mill and a chapel of Neo-Gothic architecture containing many old stained glass windows. Enough to keep the visitor occupied on the walking tour or by miniature train ride throughout the grounds for several hours. (I went all three days.)

I was particularly interested in the Ralph Foster Museum, for this is "Kewpie Doll Country." Rose O'Neill, creater of the famous Kewpies, lived only a short distance from the college in her home called Bonniebrook, and she gave the school a number of the items displayed in the museum, including the very first Kewpie doll made. Rose O'Neill is something of a local heroine, and one of the restaurants is named for her.

KEWPIES ARE very big in the collecting world today. They were originally German-American bisque dolls based on the O'Neill illustrations in women's magazines in the early 1900s. The Kewpie is a little cherubic figure with rudimentary wings and a curled topknot, usually depicted au naturel, but sometimes in costume, such as the soldier, the cook, the fisherman, etc. One was cast in the pose of Rodin's famous statue "The Thinker." Later Kewpies were made of celluloid and were popular carnival prizes.

Collectors favor anything Kewpie — in addition to the dolls themselves — such as original magazine pictures, trays, buttons and postal cards. Many of these are unauthorized versions, not bearing the Rose O'Neill signature, but still collectible.

The School's museum sells a delightful line of postal cards (one of which is pictured). Other Rose O'Neill art work is displayed, including some really handsome Art Nouveau type posters, showing that she was a famous artist before she became the mother of the Kewpies.

THE RALPH Foster Museum also houses hundreds of artifacts from cultures of the North and South American Indians, one of the finest antique cameo jewelry exhibits I've ever seen, an entire floor of Western memorabilia, including thousands of old firearms and some excellent dioramas of animals of the world, including two huge polar bears. This "stuffed" animal collection rivals that of many larger museums, if you care for that sort of thing. Children would love a tour of the School of the Ozarks and the museum, for it is light and lively, run by students, with few "don't touch" signs.

Outdoors are many pieces of old farm machinery, stage coaches and the miniature train ride which I enjoyed as much as the grandchildren did. I think they took me on the train to keep me quiet for a while.

THE FOOD at the school's huge, spotless, beautifully decorated cafeteria is excellent — home-cooked and southern style. And very reasonable.

Many places in the Ozarks are more highly touted as tourist meccas, but we enjoyed our tour of the School of the Ozarks almost as much as the trout fishing, which, by the way, was a rousing success. With a marinade invented by my daughter-in-law (recipe upon request), they make a dish fit for any fish freak.

(If you have questions, please write Grace Carolyn Dahlberg, Suburban Living, Paddock Publications, Box 280, Arlington Heights, Ill. 60006, enclosing SASE. For information about the School of the Ozarks and its program for students, write the school, care of Office of Public Relations, Point Lookout, Mo. 65726.)

TOOTHPICK TOWERS

You can build an Eiffel tower, a bridge or a modern skyscraper — all from flat toothpicks! Start with a cardboard base. Build your toothpick construction by gluing the toothpicks together with clear household cement. Hold each toothpick in place for a few seconds until the glue begins to set.

You may want to add cardboard or construction paper pieces to your building. Perhaps you'll want to go on to build a whole toothpick city!

DOW gains 8.60 points in year's slowest trading

NEW YORK (UPI) — The stock market registered a sharp gain Friday, but analysts said it lacked meaning because the trading was the slowest of the year on the New York Stock Exchange.

The news background generally was favorable, but analysts said it was difficult to determine its effect on the market because turnover totaled only 10,610,000 shares, the slowest since 9,538,050 shares were traded during a four-hour session Dec. 24, 1974. Turnover Thursday totaled 12,460,000 shares.

The Dow Jones industrial average, a 3.52-point loser Thursday, gained 8.60 points to 825.64. For the week, the closely followed average gained 7.90 points.

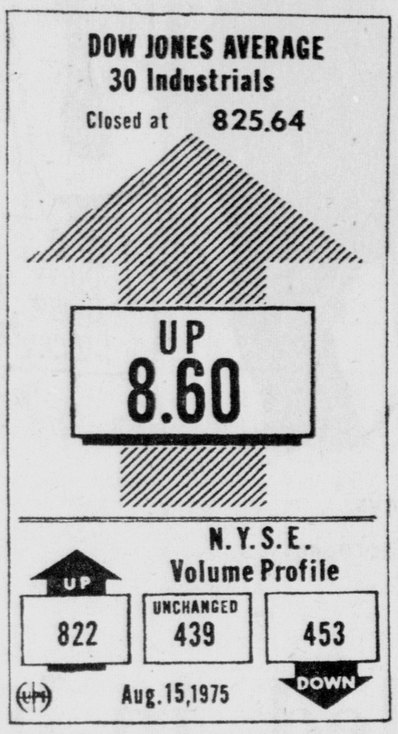

Standard & Poor's 500-stock index gained 0.76 to 86.36. The average price of an NYSE common share increased by 25 cents.

THE BREADTH figures also showed the market had little conviction. Of the 1,714 issues crossing the tape, 822 advanced, 453 declined and 439 remained unchanged, the latter reflecting investor uncertainty.

Observers said the advance was helped by some bargain hunting in the blue chips and glamors, and by short-covering — replacing borrowed shares sold earlier.

Reliance Corp. preferred "C" stock topped the Big Board actives, up ½ to 10 5/8 on 163,700 shares, including a block of 163,000 shares at 10½. General Telephone & Electronics followed, up 1/8 to 22 3/8 on 100,000 shares, including a block of 105,400 shares at 22½. Its GTE Northwest unit filed a $12.1 million rate increase with the Washington state Utilities and Transportation Commission.

House of Fabrics was the third most active issue, off ½ to 8 on 115,200 shares, including a block of 100,000 shares at 8. Prices closed higher in slow trading on the American Stock Exchange. The average price of an Amex share gained three cents. Volume totaled 1,320,000 shares, compared with 1,310,000 traded Thursday.

Methodist evangelicals work to stem liberalism

Evangelicals within the United Methodist Church, unhappy at what they consider the denomination's liberal drift, have proposed a plan for making two of the church's seminaries evangelical.

The proposal was suggested by the Rev. Edmund Robb, pastor of St. Luke's United Methodist Church, Lubbock, Tex., at the annual Good News Convocation, a gathering of United Methodist theological conservatives.

"United Methodism is a sick denomination," Robb told the convocation, adding later that: "I am convinced that our seminaries bear a major portion of the responsibility.

"If we have a sick church it is largely because we have sick seminaries."

ACCORDING TO Robb, most United Methodist seminaries — there are presently 14 seminaries and a recommendation from a denominational study group to cut back to 10 — "are committed to contemporary theology."

"We have seen them evolve from orthodoxy to classical liberalism, to neo-orthodoxy, to existentialism. With the bankruptcy of theistic existentialism, came the advent of secular theology . . .

"Then later came the theology of hope, realized eschatology, the theology of liberation and the theological and moral confusion of situation ethics."

In addition, Robb said, Methodism's pluralism — the idea of the church as an umbrella for liberals and evangelicals — is a one way street: graduates of evangelical colleges are told to go to a liberal seminary "for balance."

"When is a graduate of a liberal college told by the establishment to go to a conservative seminary for balance?" Robb asked.

ROBB'S RESPONSE, which Good News officials said was his own and had not yet been discussed by the board of the evangelical organization, is that two UM seminaries "be entrusted to evangelical boards of trustees and continued as official United Methodist seminaries."

He would want the seminaries to share in all current denominational funding, with endowments and libraries maintained and increased on a par with other seminaries.

"Such schools would be loyal to the church, orthodox in theology, Wesleyan in interpretation, 20th century in outlook, socially prophetic and involved, evangelistic in spirit, missionary-minded and concerned for the local church," he said.

Robb also suggested, as alternate proposals, that theological faculties be truly inclusive, including evangelicals as well as liberal or radical theologians, and that more support be given to independent seminaries not associated with the denomination.

IF ALL OF THESE proposals fail he said, evangelicals should begin thinking about establishing their own seminary.

"If the denominational leadership is unresponsive to our need, we have no alternative but to provide adequate training for our future ministers," Robb said.

"Let us serve notice," he concluded, ". . . that we will no longer turn over our converts to the theological liberals who neither understand or teach the biblical faith."

Female priest issue enters civil realm

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The issue of ordination of women to the Episcopal priesthood has moved from ecclesiastical to civil arenas.

Lawyers for the Rev. Betty Bone Schiess of New York have announced they filed a complaint Aug. 1 charging employment discrimination with the New York State Human Rights Commission and the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission.

She was one of 11 women irregularly ordained to the Episcapal priesthood at a controversial service July 29, 1974.

The complaint charges Rev. Schiess' bishop, the Rt. Rev. Ned Cole, with illegal discrimination in employment because of her sex.

Rev. Schiess said she had been offered — and accepted — a position as "priest associate" with Grace Church in Syracuse, N.Y.

Cole, however, refused to grant her the necessary license to exercise her priestly responsibilities within the diocese on the grounds that a woman is not eligible.

Cole has said Rev. Schiess is fully qualified to be a priest but he insists he will not license her until the canons of the church are changed to expressly authorize women priests.

The case could become a landmark decision because it touches on such basic constitutional issues as a woman's right to be employed without discrimination, her right to worship according to her conscience and the doctrine of the separation of church and state.

No blood pressure in left arm

What would cause a person to have a different blood pressure reading in one arm from the other? In fact, the last time it was difficult to obtain a blood pressure reading in my left arm at all. This condition has existed for 17 years already. I am 64 years old and have high blood pressure, last reading in my right arm was 190 over 94. I am 5 feet 6 inches tall, weight 138 pounds

One of the most common causes is a variation in the location of the artery in the arm. Then when the pressure is taken the examiner has difficulty in finding the right place to pick up the sounds.

Beyond that you can have sudden fluctuations in blood pressure. I am surprised how many people do not appreciate that blood pressure responds as a reflex. The pressure won't change as quick as you get a knee jerk from tapping the knee or as the eye blinks, but it isn't too much slower Reflexes can shut down small blood vessels almost as fast, and the pressure rises at once, or the vessels open and the pressure falls at once.

Then there is the possibility of an obstruction to the artery supplying your left arm. This can occur from a birth defect (a variant of coarction of the aorta). The artery to the left arm comes directly off the main artery (aortic arch) from the heart. When the arch is constricted just before the origin of that artery, you may have high blood pressure in your right arm and low blood pressure in the left arm. The reverse of this does not occur (low pressure in the right arm and high in the left arm).

This particular birth defect is associated with the point where an arterial shunt exists between the pulmonary and aortic arteries during fetal life. The artery normally shunts blood around the lungs, because the fetus isn't using the lungs. It closes at birth, but the point of its attachment to the aorta may result in a constriction in a few cases.

Then you could have an obstruction in the origin of the artery to the arm from a buildup of fatty-cholesterol deposits. You would be more prone to this problem because of high blood pressure. However, 17 years ago at age 47 you would be most unlikely to have that problem. Women are not prone to fatty-cholesterol deposits at that age unless they already have a serious medical problem such as high blood pressure, diabetes, or kidney disease. This leads me to think your problem is either in difficulty in the technique of taking your pressure or a mild birth defect.

What is Kimmelsteil-Wilson disease and what causes it?

It is a complication of diabetes. In some diabetics the filtering part of the kidney becomes damaged leading to serious disturbance in kidney function. The involved kidneys often lose the blood protein albumin, and various tests demonstrate the kidney damage.

Keep in mind that diabetes affects many parts of the body, including the blood vessels to the heart, brain, legs and throughout the body. It also affects the eyes and kidneys and even the nerve cells. No wonder diabetes can cause so many varied symptoms.

The almanac

Today is Saturday, Aug. 16, the 228th day of 1975 with 137 to follow.

The moon is between its first quarter and full phase.

The morning stars are Mars, Jupiter and Saturn.

The evening stars are Mercury and Venus.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Leo.

Robert Ringling, originator of the major circus world, was born Aug. 16, 1897.

On this day in history:

• In 1896, gold was discovered in the Klondike region of Canada's Yukon Territory.

• In 1948, baseball Hall-of-Famer Babe Ruth died in New York City of cancer.

• In 1971, New York stocks broke a 197-year price and volume record in response to President Nixon's wage-price-rent freeze announced the day before.

• In 1974, Emperor Haile Selassie, longtime ruler of Ehtiopia, was stripped of his powers by the Ethiopian army.

A thought for the day: American naturalist John Burroughs said, "Time does not become sacred until we have lived it."

Herald opinion

40-cent hike unacceptable

Residents in Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 should not be expected to vote in favor of a substantial tax increase to bail the district out of financial trouble, as proposed by the school administration, particularly in light of the recent feeble efforts by district officials to reduce its anticipated $1.7 million deficit.

Supt. Roger Bardwell has recommended holding a Sept. 27 referendum to raise taxes 40 cents per $100 equalized assessed valuation. Officials have pledged to use only 15 cents of that increase initially but expect to dip into the rest if and when needed.

Residents are currently being taxed 15 cents below the limit set by the state, and as a result Dist. 59 is not receiving its full state aid entitlement. It is reasonable to ask the people to support their schools on an equal basis as people in other communities, but a 40-cent increase is just too high.

Earlier this week the administration proposed budget cuts of $247,664. The bulk of the savings resulted from the earlier elimination of an administrative position and dropping money set aside for an area-wide deaf education program which has been located in another district.

A district facing such a severe deficit should not stop there.

Dist. 59 is not the only district in the Northwest suburbs facing financial hard times but it appears to be the only one which is not willing to make a serious attempt to tighten the belt.

When Arlington Heights Dist. 25 was in a money bind, it cut back on its music program. Des Plaines Dist. 62 went for a referendum prepared to cut out the hot lunch program and cut back on Spanish, art and music if it failed. High School Dist. 125, facing a $200,000 deficit, gave teachers a conservative 1.6 per cent raise for the 1975-76 school year.

Many businesses, hit by inflation and declining revenues, have ordered a 10 per cent across the board cut in all budgets and given employes only token raises.

Cutting a budget is not an easy task but in Dist. 59 it has become a necessity. Before the board of education approves any referendum to send to the voters it should take scissors in hand and cut.

No ribbing needed, in her shape

by DOROTHY MEYER

Sometimes people will say to me, "Why don't you write a column about - - -," and I will tell them, "If I haven't experienced it, I can't write about it." Last week, despite the fact that no one has ever suggested a column about wrecking the muscles in my rib cage, I wrecked the muscles in my rib cage.

Now I am encased in something called a rib belt which pushes my shape all out of shape, and in profile I look like a pickle barrel. It also gives me an uplift where there's nothing to lift up.

At first I figured the pain would go away, so I didn't go to the doctor even though I moaned a lot and walked funny.

Then a few close friends noticed that I was walking funny and they hugged me around my ruined ribs and said, "What's the matter, honey, did you hurt yourself?"

(Note: If you suspect that a friend has an injury or is in pain, don't touch them. Anywhere.)

When I told them that I thought I'd pulled a muscle, they said, "What did you do, try to lift a piano?" I said no, that I'd only pulled a big weed out of my tomato patch, and they laughed like I was kidding.

Next they wanted to know if it hurt much and I said, "Only when you laugh." Of course, it also hurt when I laughed. Or coughed or sneezed. It even hurt when I only inhaled or exhaled which I frequently do without thinking.

Finally I went to the doctor because I was tired of friendly people hugging me and saying, "What's the matter honey?"

(I noticed this same excessive friendliness the time I fell and erased my knee down to the bone. Men who had never laid a hand on me before decided to lay a hand on my knee, squeeze it and say, "Hi, kiddo, what's new?")

Then there was the time I got an infection from a cut on a rusty can and the doctor gave me a tetanus shot in my left arm. Right-handed hugger buddies suddenly threw their left arms about my shoulder in order to ask me what's new.)

I SHOULD have known that the doctor would escort me into the examining room with a strong arm around my pain while he asked, "What seems to be the trouble?" As soon as I could breathe again I told him, but politely, and he prescribed a pain killer and this infernal rib belt.

Last night I saw a bunch of people I hadn't seen in a long time and you know where I got a friendly jab by way of greeting.

Ths morning I don't know what's worse — a rib belt or a belt in the ribs.

Resident of Heatherlea asks annexation benefit

I find many mixed emotions concerning the annexation of unincorporated areas by the Village of Palatine. While the village gains in both tax revenue sharing and additional tax income, what do the homeowners share in?

We will still pay the same county taxes plus the increase for the library, and if annexed we will have the additional village taxes. What do we get in return?

The purchase of Ferndale Heights has fallen through. If it ever comes to pass, we will be assessed to pay for it. If it never comes to pass, we will continue to use Ferndale Heights as the law does not allow a switch to Palatine water and sewer facilities. Use of the Palatine pool which normally is overcrowded and requires driving our children to and from the pool will be no advantage as a park with pool is being constructed within walking distance.

We will no longer have any control over placement of street lights or physical changes to our communities. We will receive no educational advantages for our children. We will, in truth, receive no major fire or police emergency advantages.

IN SHORT, it appears we will pay the village, add to their revenue through State and Federal sharing plans and get nothing in return.

Why has no deadline been set for the return of the proposed petitions for annexation? Is the village afraid of putting the question to a referendum? Have certain proponents of this annexation been promised to be slated for village office if they sneak it through? Has the passing of annexation already been bought and paid for politically? If not, why is the one subdivision without common boundary so interested in annexation?

As a homeowner, I urge all concerned citizens to assure their right of knowing the truth, the facts and vote by referendum by refusing to sign the petitions in favor of annexation and demanding more information and being assured of their right of referendum — a privilege the current village board is trying to deny us. Who wants to hastily become part of those who so far have proven their intentions to deny homeowners their rights?

Kennedy: still the answer's 'no'

by IRA BERKOW

NEW YORK — Before entering the large room with chandeliers and cushy carpet, Sen. Edward Kennedy, this morning's star attraction, whispered something to a young lady on his staff.

She smiled and somewhat surreptitiously slipped from her purse a large chartreuse comb and the Senator from Massachusetts stole into the gentlemen's quarters.

Toilette concluded, Sen. Kennedy was ready to meet the press and announce — well, no, not that he was going to run for president, as he is unendingly asked — but that the fourth annual Robert F. Kennedy Memorial pro-celebrity tennis tournament would be held at Forest Hills Stadium on Saturday, Aug. 23.

The Senator has a strong-jawed and large if lean face, not at all the jowly, baby-brother Teddy of some photographs. Yet his skin, medium rare from the Cape Cod sun, seems delicate. His hair, at least now, was in stable waves, modishly long at the collar, reddish-brown but with graying tufts at the sideburns. His smile is toothy, slightly chipmunky. His eyes are a light blue-green, crinkly at the edges; saggy eyelids add an unstudied soft, sad quality. A mole on the right side of his chin looks powdered in order to obscure it a bit for pictures.

His couture is unremarkable — conservative dark blue suit and tie, striped shirt, black shoes; however, he is much nattier from the waist up, the part that the camera concentrates on. His pants are baggy and shoes unglossy.

"In days pahst' and "on behawf of" are phrases he uses in his celebrated Kennedy New Englandese. His freckled hands are held in front of him, alternating one on top the other, with occasional short forays to the side to advance a point.

He spoke about the expected $100,000-plus gate that the tournament would yield in order to help the education of "disadvantaged young people," blacks, yellows, Appalachian whites, Indians, Chicanos, "so that they may serve as catalysts of racial justice, just as Robert Kennedy was a catalytic agent in this area.

"And we hope," said the Senator, "that it will give some of these children the chance to experience the joys and possibilities of this country."

Someone in the audience soon asked him about his tennis game. "You'd better ask Tip O'Neill about that," he said, a wry reference to Congressman O'Neill's recent statement that Sen. Kennedy had told him that he would run for President.

Asked about the validity of O'Neill's remark, the Senator said, "I will not be a candidate. It is unequivocal." And yet he was not loathe to bring it up, however obliquely, at the first opportunity.

"If I said it to Tip," said Kennedy, "I said it in a humorless vein." Mrs. Robert Kennedy, seated next to him, laughed. He caught the slip and laughed, too. "Humorous vein," he backtracked.

"The last time I did this," Sen. Kennedy said, "I said that it was going to be a great 'turnis tenement.' I heard someone in the back laugh. Someone else laughed. Then it grew, and built into a crescendo. I looked and saw that the one who started it was Ethel. She always catches me."

More questions about the tennis tournament, and the seeding of such pros as Arthur Ashe and Pancho Gonzales, and celebrities that include Art Buchwald, Dustin Hoffman, Elton John and Bill Cosby.

It was established that none of the Kennedy family children would participate. "Too many of them," said Buchwald, the master of ceremonies at the press conference. "There wouldn't be room for anyone else."

Afterward, informally, Kennedy answered questions about Turkey's removal of American air bases ("regrettable"), and inflation ("No, I don't think it has 'bottomed out,' and neither do the 13 per cent of the population that is unemployed") and his candidacy ("Only for Senator from Massachusetts").

Senator, someone asked, did you ever dream of becoming President of the United States?

"No," he said.

"Never?"

He riveted his eyes on the interviewer, as if the persistence was an affront. "No," the Senator said, unblinking.

We wish to take this time to thank you for making us famous.

In your Saturday, June 28, publication, you featured a section on boating. We were very surprised and delighted to find not only a picture of our boat but our names in print as well.

Almost all of our friends have seen it and have commented about it. People we meet for the first time say "Oh, yes, we saw your picture in the paper!" And it makes us very happy.

BOSTON, Aug. 16 — The Rev. Henry Caner reported to London that 50 of the 115 families belonging to his church had fled to England or Halifax. "If we do not die by the sword, we shall perish by famine," he said of his Loyalist congregation.

JON ERIKSON of Chicago is in a jubilant mood after completing a two-way swim of the English Channel in 30 hours, breaking by three minutes the 10-year-old record held by his father.

Erickson beats odds father's record

Jon Erikson of Chicago completed a two-way swim of the English Channel in 30 hours Friday, breaking by three minutes the 10-year-old record held by his father.

The 20-year-old physical education student overcame jelly fish bites, bad tides, fog and even ocean liners to complete the England-France-England distance of 42 miles.

One of the first things he did on getting out of the chilly water was to telephone his father, Ted, to break the news.

"I was confident," he said, "I thought I would do about 24 to 27 hours, and when we went over from England to France, we were pretty much on schedule, just under 12 hours.

"But on the way back, we got caught against tides and current which slowed us up a lot. The return took us 17 hours 50 minutes."

Erikson said he never considered giving up, despite the hazards.

"I got stung a couple of times, once on the nose and once on the arm, by some jelly fish," he said, "but that happens. I was surprised I got stung on the nose, but I really did not feel like giving up.

Only two other men besides the Eriksons, an Argentinian and an Englishman, have succeeded in two-way channel swims. The young Erikson plans a week in Europe before returning home.

Sox, Cubs both lose, Madlock still hot

It was a bad night for baseball, Chicago-style, as the White Sox were nipped by the Boston Red Sox 3-2, while the Cubs were losing in Houston, 4-1, Friday night.

Cecil Cooper accounted for two runs with a second inning triple and a fourth inning homer to back up Luis Tiant's seven-hit victory over the White Sox.

Tiant, who walked three and struck out three, picked up his 15th win of the year against 11 losses and gained his 14th complete game.

White Sox loser, Jesse Jefferson (3-7) gave up a lead-off triple to Cooper in the second and he scored on Rico Petrocelli's sacrifice fly.

Chicago tied the score in the third on a triple by Pat Kelly and Jorge Orta's single. Carlos May doubled down the right field line, but when Orta tried to score from first, he was thrown out at the plate.

The White Sox also scored in their half of the sixth on a walk to Orta and Ken Henderson's double.

Cliff Johnson's seventh inning double broke a 1-1 tie and sparked the Astros to victory.

Larry Dierker went the distance for the Astros to pick up his 11th victory of the season against 12 losses.

The Cubs jumped to a 1-0 lead in the third inning when Bill Madlock singled with two out, his 10th hit in his last 11 times at bat, and scored when Jose Cardenal doubled and centerfielder Cesar Cedeno's throw was wild.

The Astros went ahead in the seventh with three runs. Greg Gross doubled with one out, Cedeno walked and Johnson doubled home two runs as left fielder Cardenal booted the ball. Milt May followed with a single to drive in a run to make it 4-1.

Madlock, the National League's leading hitter, finished with 3-for-4 and raised his batting average to .359.

SCOREBOARD WATCHING. Team and individual totals will be featured as soon as they arrive after nine and 18 holes Sunday at tournament central in the Paddock Publications Inter-League Handicap Golf Tournament. Buffalo Grove's golf club will host the Paddock tourney with the first foursome going off at 10:19 a.m.

26th Paddock tournament shows record golf field

by PAUL LOGAN

A record field of 37 teams will be teeing off Sunday in the 26th annual Paddock Publications Inter-League Handicap Golf Tournament at Buffalo Grove Golf Club.

This is the second time the tourney has been scheduled for the par 72, 6465-yard layout. It was last held there in 1971. That year the representative of the Scratch League finished ahead of 30 other teams.

Two fine golfers lead the 148-man field with zero handicaps — Ed Johnson of Ekco Products, Sportsman Country Club, and Fred Fassnacht of DiVito Construction, Rob Roy Country Club.

These two as well as several other fine players will be battling for the low gross title as well as a dozen golf balls. The biggest fight will be for low net honors with another box of balls going to the net champ.

Three teams will be taking home individual trophies for first, second and third place. The top foursome will also carry away the huge traveling trophy at the layout where Al Griffith will serve as the host professional.

Each golfer will receive golf tees from Northern Illinois Gas Co. as well as a golf towel prior to teeing off.

Al Griffith

And if history repeats itself, another check for $100 will be going to the golfer who scores a hole-in-one. Back in 1970, Mike Spinello recorded the first ace on the 17th hole at Thunderbird Country Club.

Rob Roy Golf Club heads the list of 13 courses represented with six different leagues. These are the teams competing along with their respective leagues:

Rob Roy — Tuesday Twilight (Climax Press), Park Ridge Twilight (Crossroads Realty), Des Plaines Twilight (DiVito Construction), St. Alphonsus Twilight, St. James Twilight (Locascio Builders) and Fastex Twilight.

Buffalo Grove — Honeywell Twilight, Buffalo Grove Friday, Multigraphic Twilight and Wickes Furniture Twilight.

Palatine — United Airlines Twilight, Union Oil Monday and Tuesday and American Can.

Old Orchard — Arlington V.F.W. (Cake Box), Old Orchard Scratch (Bentley, Barnes & Lynn), Parker Hannifin Twilight and Searle Analytic Twilight.

Golden Acres — Hoffman Estates (Ted's Plumbing), Twinbrook YMCA Twilight, Western Electric Twilight and City Products Twilight.

Thunderbird — T-Bird Twilight (Bud's Installations), Buehler YMCA Twilight, Illinois Bell Twilight and Our Lady of the Wayside Twilight.

Mount Prospect — Friday Twilight (Clayton Court Apts.), St. Raymond Twilight and Northwest Suburban YMCA Twilight (Mount Prospect State Bank).

Arlington — Friday Twilight (L-Nor Cleaners) and Arlington Elks 2048 Twilight.

Hilldale — Mobil Oil Twilight and Arlington Heights Twilight (Binzel Industries).

White Pines — V.F.W. Post 2149 Twilight.

Sportsman's — Ekco Products Twilight.

Bonnie Dundee — Chemplex Twilight.

Glenview — Moore Business Forms Twilight.

Best route to tourney site

The best way to get to Buffalo Grove Golf Club, site of the 26th annual Paddock Publications Inter-League Handicap Golf Tournament, is to take Dundee Road (Highway 68) to Buffalo Grove and head north.

Drive for about a mile, turning left just past the church on Lake-Cook Road. The course is located at 400 Lake-Cook Road.

Phillips new Prospect mat coach

Darryl Phillips

Darryl Phillips is going home.

After serving as an assist coach for nine years at two high schools, Phillips is going back to his high school alma mater — Prospect — as the head wrestling coach.

Athletic Director George Gattas announced the appointment of Phillips, 33, and added, "He's a very enthusiastic, hard working man who's very knowledgable in this sport and is liked and respected by everybody in the area."

Phillips is the fourth head wrestling coach in Prospect history, taking the place of Bill Harlow. He brings to his new position plenty of experience having assisted in Forest View's fine program the past seven years as well as working in football and track and field.

He coached two years at Mount Vernon, Ind., while earning his masters degree at the University of Indiana. Phillips graduated from Evansville College in 1966.

While at Prospect, Phillips established himself as an outstanding wrestler. He won district and sectional championships as a sophomore. a district title as a junior and district and sectional titles as a senior. He was the squad's most valuable player his last two years and was all-conference his senior year.

"They have great facilities and I'm glad I'm there," said Phillips of his return home.

"It will take a couple of years to get it going again," he continued, speaking of his rebuilding task. "It was good and it can be good again. It's just going to take a lot of hard work, effort and time to get it going."

Phillips, his wife, Jan, and their three children, Todd, 6, Corey, 2, and Mike, five weeks, presently live in Elk Grove Village.

Rebels achieve a goal in fine summer season

by CHARLIE DICKINSON

Rick Peekel and Ray Gross go back to the beginning of the Northwest Rebels.

In the team's first year of existence Peekel, from the University of Illinois and Fremd High School, and Gross saw the Rebels go all the way to the finals of the Greater Illinois Baseball League playoffs.

They lost to the Chicago Hornets in the championship game and Peekel was tagged with the loss. When the two teams met again for the 1975 GIBL championship Peekel was given the ball and told to go to it.

"I know Rick remembered that loss he got in the playoffs our first year," said Gross, who acts as general manager and sometime relief pitcher for the Rebels, "and he wanted this one as much as I did."

Peekel got the win by the unaesthetic score of 12-11 and the Rebels, who finished third during the regular GIBL season with a 21-7 record, were the playoff champions.

"This is the culmination of all the goals I set for myself when I started this team four years ago," Gross said. "Since I don't know how involved I'll be next year because of my business this championship means that much more to me."

There were five players on the 1975 playoff champions who have been with Gross since the beginning of the team. They are Wally Weiner, Dean Sheridan, Scott Day, Bill Maffy and Peekel.

"There are a lot of people I want to thank," Gross said. "First of all I want to thank the five veterans plus all the other players, and Manager Rick Marino Jack Verdone the owner of Jake's Pub and John Gelch of Harper and Lloyd Meyer for the use of their fields."

The Rebels offered a chance to represent the GIBL in the National Baseball Federation tournament in Louisville but declined because most of the team will be returning to school at that time.

"We didn't feel we'd be adequately represented," Gross said, "so the team voted against it. But we all felt that after winning the playoffs, which was the big thing to us, going to Louisville was kind of secondary."

All the goals the Rebels achieved would have been pipedreams without the players and the Rebels had them in abundance.

There were seven bats in the Rebel lineup that finished the season with .300-plus batting averages.

George Vukovich, only 19 and a rookie on the Rebel squad, led the team with a .400 clip and was voted the Most Valuable Player by his teammates.

The six other top hitters on the Rebel crew were Steve Scholten (.385), Ron DeBolt (.375), Wally Weiner (.358), Dean Sheridan (.330), Ralph Baker (.328 and Scott Day (.327).

The pitching was just as impressive with five hurlers with sub-3.00 ERAs. Willie Kozel, like Vukovich only 19 and a rookie on the squad, was voted the Most Valuable Pitcher as he won nine of 10 decisions and posted a skimpy 1.66 ERA.

Randy Cordova (7-2) led the team in strikeouts with 61.

"This was the type of team that might have let down when they got behind in the playoffs," said Marino, the Rebels' manager, "but they were losing 8-4 and they kept clawing back. A great hunch of talent."

"Rick did a great job of pulling the team together, Gross said. "We're not sure who will be back next year but we'll have another good team.

"The Rebels have really just gotten started."

Adventure

Week in Canada a very rewarding experience

by DON FRISKE

It developed around a visit from an old friend and the urge to do something adventurous.

Last February, Bruce Bazsali was visited by Ken McGhie, a friend of his in high school, who brought with him a film of the new land he had purchased near Ontario, Can. He was planning a camp for the upcoming summer in which students could learn about the outdoors in an organized manner.

Bazsali, who teaches physical education and is an assistant football coach at Rolling Meadows High School, liked the film and the idea.

So he began to get a group of students together who also enjoyed the idea of a week in Canada. He met with each of their parents to learn a little about their backgrounds and to explain what the trip would be all about.

On July 30 they were ready to go.

Bazsali and his sidekick Mike Mullaney boarded the van provided by the camp with the 11 students who were picked for the trip. Mullaney, also a teacher at the high school, has been on an adventure kick with Bazsali for about two years now. In that time, they've taken up parachuting, hang gliding, cliff diving, and rock climbing.

All football players, the 11 students who joined the two coaches on the trip were Ken Breitbeil, Jim Broderick, Bill Dickinson, Dennis Drolet, Bruce Jordan, Mark Miner, Jeff Schrock, Pete Shaw, Steve Stiert, Ted Tyk, and Barry Vandelinder.

All sorts of activities were available to the group, the first of its kind to go through the program. They included rock climbing, canoeing, water skiing, fishing, camp craft, backpacking, sailing, archery, riflery, football, basketball, and the "solo," a favorite with the group.

The "solo" is spending two days and a night alone in the wild with as little equipment as possible. The students were taken out in a truck and dropped off in various spots in the forest where they would have to set up camp and also navigate their way back to the central location.

A campsite with a wild berry patch nearby is always sought and also a location where the beautiful sunset, immense stars, and Northern lights can be visibly seen. As Baszali describes it, these are the essentials of a "solo."

"One night on a 'solo' I made a camp on a ledge, and you know when you're in that situation, your imagination can run away with you," Bazsali said. "So I decided to make a challenge for myself and made a goal to get all my gear across a small body of water without getting anything wet and set up a new camp. So I made a little birchbark raft just big enough to get across and after three trips I had all my gear on the other side. I found a great spot next to a big rock on pine needles that felt as comfortable as a mattress. I slept great that night."

The sun rises about 4:30 and doesn't descend until around 9:30 p.m. and still the group found it hard to fit everything they had planned into the long day.

Every morning, a blackboard would show all of the day's available activities and it was up to each of the boys to check off the ones they were interested in.

"We did do some work with the football, mostly passing it around," said Bazsali, "but we had intended to do more. The interest in learning more about the outdoors took up most of the time."

One of the most enjoyed activities was the rock climbing. Six of the students climbed one rock — 150 feet — that had never been successfully scaled before because of its straight-up incline.

They passed an eagle's nest and then climbed through a wedge to get to the top. Drolet slipped once, but regained his balance, for the only close call of the climb.

The big adventure, the big close call, happened not to any of the students but to Bazsali and Mullaney.

Early one morning they decided to take a ride in a motor boat out on the vast lake. Equipped with only a map and needing more, Bazsali explains what happened:

"Somehow we got turned around near an island. The islands are huge and it's hard to distinguish them from the shoreline, which all looks the same anyway. After awhile we were getting a little skeptical, hoping a boat would pass by.

"We imagined how our skeletons would be found, me holding the map and pointing ahead, looking over my shoulder at Mullaney, who would be giving me the 'I-told-you-so' look. We figured we could live on fish for awhile but then we realized we didn't have any matches.

"Just when we figured there was no hope, we went around a bend and there was a resort, with little kids running around and taking snapshots of us. We felt kind of silly when we had to ask them where we were."

They had planned to be gone for a half hour but didn't get back until four hours had passed. They told the students that the fishing was so good they decided to stay out but when asked to see the fish, that story dissolved.

"We really didn't think we would find our way back and that resort, out in the middle of nowhere, came as a surprise," said Bazsali.

The trip was worthwhile for all the participants and they plan on going back again next summer. Because of its success, McGhie will also open it up to other high school groups that are interested.

"The guys got a lot out of the trip, coming from 11 different backgrounds and blending in well together. They found that everyone has something to offer and learned how to lead and to follow," Bazsali said. "The thing I got most out of the trip was watching the guys. The 'solo' gives a person a chance to re-evaluate his philosophies and to realize that it's a big world out there. I thought about the guys on the 'solo,' about how much they really wanted to learn about the outdoors."

Getting them away from the girlfriend, car, and television for while, Bazsali was amazed to see what they could and wanted to learn.

Honest fishing winners? Anglers take lie test

Vic Watia

A young angler removes his bass fishing cap and wipes the sweat from his forehead. "You think the tournament was tough," he remarks, "spending five minutes in that room was the toughest thing I ever did."

One-by-one, 10 professional bass fishermen will take their turns entering the small room. While waiting in line they may nervously joke about fishing conditions or partners they drew during competition.

The small talk is designed to keep their minds off what they soon must face — a polygraph test.

But, when they finally emerge from the room they are winners . . . honest winners.

The lie detector test for professional bass anglers was instituted last year by George Ortes, president of the Florida-based American Bass Fisherman, a group which sponsors fishing tournaments that sometimes have as much as $100,000 in prize money.

The tests — first given during ABF's $100,000 World Championship Open last November — now have become standard for each ABF tournament regardless of the payoff.

Although maintaining the majority of fishermen are honest (despite their reputations for fish stories), Oates also realized tournaments with first prize purses as high as $20,000 possibly would provide temptations that could draw the dishonest. Also, every sport has its disgruntled participants who maintain winners could never have gotten to the number one position without cheating.

What Oates needed was a sure-fire method of bringing off his first $100,000 tournament without doubts being cast at the winners. He accomplished it with the polygraph test, and now plans to hold another $100,000 tournament on Nov. 21-22 at Florida's Kissimmee Chain of Lakes.

The biggest money in such contests is paid out to the top 10 places, therefore Oates required that the top 10 anglers in every ABF tournament take the test.

Besides insuring winners could gain their titles without question, the tests also eliminated the need to check boats for illegal fish catching devices or fish that might be stashed in livewells before competition.

"We don't have to check out boats to see if fish are concealed," Oates said. "The polygraph tests eliminate any doubts. Nobody's going to cheat and pass our tests."

In addition, the tests allowed ABF to hold "open draw" tournaments in which a man can fish with whomever he draws for a partner during pairings, even if it is another member of his family.

Earlier this summer at a pre-tournament banquet, Oates announced his organization had added another question to those given anglers taking the polygraph test.

"We're going to ask you if you even discussed cheating with your fishing partners," he said. "There's plenty of things to talk about when you're out in the boat, so make sure that's not one of them."

So far, no one has failed an ABF polygraph test. But how do anglers feel about the prospects of taking such a test?

"I'd be so nervous I probably couldn't pass it," many tournament anglers have remarked.

But Oates has provided options in case the issue arises. If the results of the test are questionable, the angler can appeal and request tests also be given to the fishing partners he drew during the tournament. In bass fishing contests, an angler usually draws a different partner for each day of competition.

Most anglers agree the polygraph test was a good addition to ABF's rules because it has improved the atmosphere of tournaments by eliminating any doubt about winners.

The polygraph test may be the answer for keeping professional tournaments honest, but it certainly could spoil the life of the average angler.

For instance, just the other day I was fishing and you wouldn't believe . . .

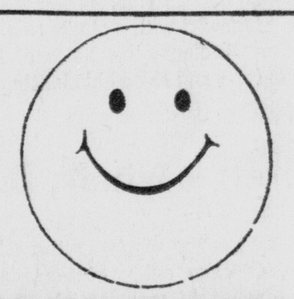

Fishing No. 1? Study supports the industry

Unpublished data based on a U.S. Bureau of Outdoor Recreation (BOR) study tends to support the fishing tackle industry's claim that fishing is the nation's No. 1 sport.

BOR counted the following millions of participants 12 years and older during June, July and August of 1972: Fishing 38 million, hunting 22.2, camping in developed camp grounds 17.5, camping in remote or wilderness areas 7.7, sailing 4.1, other boating activities 23.3, water skiing 8.5, tennis 8.6, golf 7.7. (Other investigators estimate the total fishing population to be some 60 million persons.)

The statistics were projected from a home interview survey of approximately 4,000 persons. The figures are believed to be the latest available on a national scale.

Suppliers to the dominant sports — fishing, boating, camping and shooting sports — made the 1975 American Fishing Tackle Manufacturers Association "Wonderful Outdoor World" trade show in Chicago's McCormick Place the largest of its kind ever producted.

ALL TOGETHER NOW. The Silver Knights, made up of many Northwest suburban youngsters, have become one of the best drum and baton-twirling corps in the country. The 43-member group recently won the grand national championship at South Bend, Ind.

Heart of corps in Northwest suburbs

Silver Knights — 2-time champs

by STERLING MORITA

They come from all over Chicagoland to try out for the Silver Knights. The drum and baton-twirling corps is fast becoming as precious as its name.

But the heart of the championship corps is in the Northwest suburbs. Nineteen of the 43-member group hail from Arlington Heights, Hoffman Estates, Schaumburg, Palatine, Wheeling, Elk Grove Village, Lake Zurich and Fox River Grove.

Recently, the Silver Knights became the first corps ever to win grand national championships in two categories — show and military drill.

Since 1970, there has been no better in the state. And yet, the Silver Knights have had trouble finding a sponsor to help foot the bills. The $15,000 a year they need for survival is scraped up through numerous fund-raisers and memberships.

THE SILVER KNIGHTS have done everything to collect funds — from candy sales and flower shows to an annual advertising book and a booth at the DuPage County Fair. "With the economy, it's gotten tougher," said George Scharringhausen, Elk Grove Village corps president.

To economize during the recent trip to the championships at the University of Notre Dame, South Bend, Ind., the corps stayed at the cheapest motel in town. Scharringhausen grumbled he only got about 18 hours of sleep during the 5-day stay because of noise from the all-night restaurant across the street.

To cap off the visit, a stroller, the slower version of a streaker, flashed by the youngsters.

At the national Baton Twirling Assn. competition, the Silver Knights proved to be the best in the combination of military music, marching and baton twirling. For their efforts, they won the treasured "brown jug" along with the traveling national trophy.

SCHARRINGHAUSEN attributed the corps' success to Joanne Schlueter, corps director and baton instructor for the Hoffman Estates Park District. "Joanne has been the success of the corps."

The Silver Knights were formed in 1967 as an offshoot of the Velvet Vikings. The corps members, ranging in age from 11 to 20 start the season in October with once-a-week practices and close it in July with drills every night in preparation for the championships.

Nancy Brunke, booster from Hoffman Estates, put the Silver Knights' attitude this way: "They go down there only to win first place."

HER DAUGHTER, Janet, 11, said "it was great" when the corps took the top spot. She started baton twirling in a park district program.

Another baton twirler, Allison Deguisne, 15, Hoffman Estates, joined the Silver Knights from the old Viking corps. She started baton twirling through her mother.

Sue Lee, 13, Palatine, who plays xylophone for the corps, says she wants to stay with the Silver Knights "for as long as I can."

'Cigarets overtaxed 6 cents for each carton'

Many Illinois smokers are paying six cents too much sales tax on each carton of cigarets they buy, state Revenue Director Robert Allphin said.

Allphin said the state's 12-cent cigarette tax, levied on each pack sold, is supposed to be deducted from the purchase price before the 5 per cent sales tax is computed.

As a result, he said, customers wind up "paying a tax on another state tax and that's unfair taxation."

2 charged in fatal stabbing

Rockford police Friday arrested two suspects in connection with the slaying of a 31-year-old woman Thursday.

Majorie Peterson died from multiple stab wounds and bruises. Police found the woman in her apartment but she died hours later at a local hospital.

6 killed in plane crash

The bodies of two men and four boys were found Friday in the wreckage of a Piper Cherokee airplane owned by he 140 Flying Club of Springfield, the Federal Aviation Administration said.

The plane, en route from Rockford to Quincy, disappeared from radar at 9:54 p.m. Thursday. The crash occurred in a hilly, bushy area about 20 miles north of Springfield. An FAA spokesman said it was not known why the plane was in the Springfield area since it was enroute to Quincy.

Illinois briefs

Drilling touches off blaze

A fire touched off Friday when an oil well test cut into abandoned coal mine workings. The fire destroyed a drilling rig and shot flames 100 feet into the air at the Shell Oil Co. field about two miles south of Benton.

Area firemen said the drilling penetrated the workings of a former coal mine between West Frankfort and Benton and methane gas was ignited.

10-hour skate-a-thon scheduled Sunday

Chicago Black Hawks player Dick Redmond will perform Sunday in the Chicago Area Skate-a-thon from 11 a.m. to 9 p.m. at the Woodfield Ice Arena, Woodfield Shopping Center. Proceeds from the event will go to the Muscular Dystrophy Assn.

The public is invited to participate in the event, which is cosponsored by radio station WCFL and the Muscular Dystrophy Assn. Sponsored skaters will attempt to skate the entire 10 hours, and those who finish will be awarded prizes.

Tattoo — the way of all flesh

by BARRY SIGALE

The tattoo man is explaining why he doesn't want his business to sound like a freak show. Over his shoulder, a female customer is having two tattoos — a miniature heart and sun — applied to the lower half of her torso.

"I'm not going to give anybody any cheap thrills," the tattoo man insists, refusing to answer any questions about tattoos he has placed in exotic locations.

"Should it be higher or lower?" the immodest woman of 23 asks her two companions standing beside her in the brightly lighted studio. They give her the once-over and assure her the spot is perfect. "It's a difficult decision," she says. "It's worse than picking out clothes."

CLOTHES, of course, can be discarded. Most of them are made to drop out of style quickly, anyway. Tattoos present a different problem. Surgery is necessary to have them removed. So the decision to have one is tough.

Historically, sailors on leave, prisoners with nothing else to do, they more than anyone were tattooed. Enter, then, the tattoo man. To him, the tattoo is the way of all flesh.

His tool is a pistol-like drill with five needles filled with pigments and alcohol that draws a fine line 1/32nd of an inch thick. Fancy designs and lucid colors are his signature.

Though the dyeing art is a dying art, the tattoo man lives. The demand for his services has diminished, but he remains a craftsman when called upon to apply a Japanese Samurai slaying a snake serpent or Jesus on a Cross to a customer's chest or back.

Hearts, eagles sitting and flying, flowers, and butterflies are most popular. Overtly patriotic designs are less common. More tattoos are displayed on the arm or other exposed parts of the body. They are worn like badges. Tattoos that are concealed transmit personal messages.

QUOTH THE Raven, Cliff Raven, that is, part owner of the Chicago Tattooing Co.:

"Psychologically, people who wear tattoos feel bigger. They're making a statement, defying those who think the tattoo is unacceptable, as well as showing it off to friends. Wearing a tattoo can be compared to the Samurai's top knot, the soldier's insignia. It's a peacock tail kind of thing."

American and Oriental tattoos are the specialties of the house, which is the last tattoo parlor in the city or suburbs. Raven, one of two people at work, is drawing a unicorn on the right forearm of one his customers. The man is comfortable. Raven says he's never made a mistake.

Is there any significance to the unicorn?

"I like it. I've never seen anyone with a unicorn," says Mark Markovich, 22.

How did you decide to make it yellow and brown?

"It missed the boat, the arc," Markovich jokes, "so nobody knows what it looks like or what color it is."

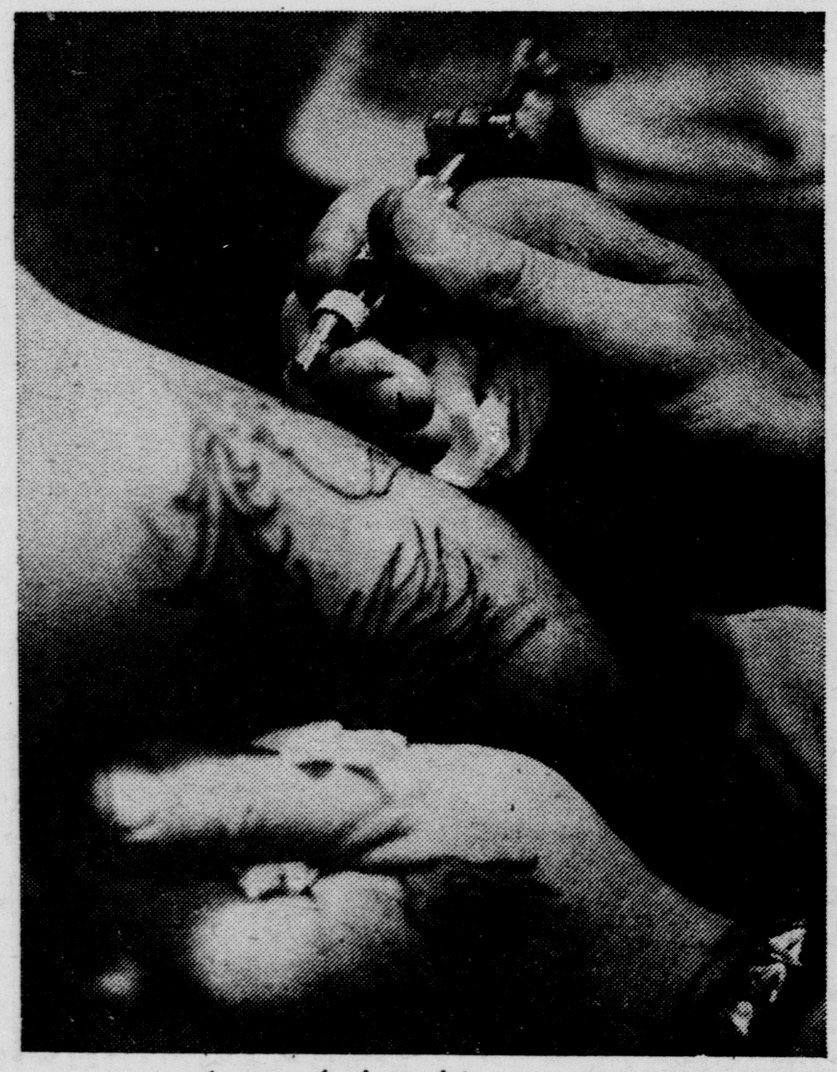

USUALLY, tattoos are drawn from stencil designs, the tattoo man tracing the lines and filling in the colors. The unicorn, a mythical horse-like animal, is created in Raven's mind. Momentarily, he becomes an artist.

"I'm not an artist at all times," he says, alluding to the hundreds of tattoos he has repeated in his 12-year career. "The potter repeats the same cup because people like it, so he is not always an artist. Occasionally he will rise to the occasion and do something different. If I were not an artist I probably couldn't have produced this piece of craft."

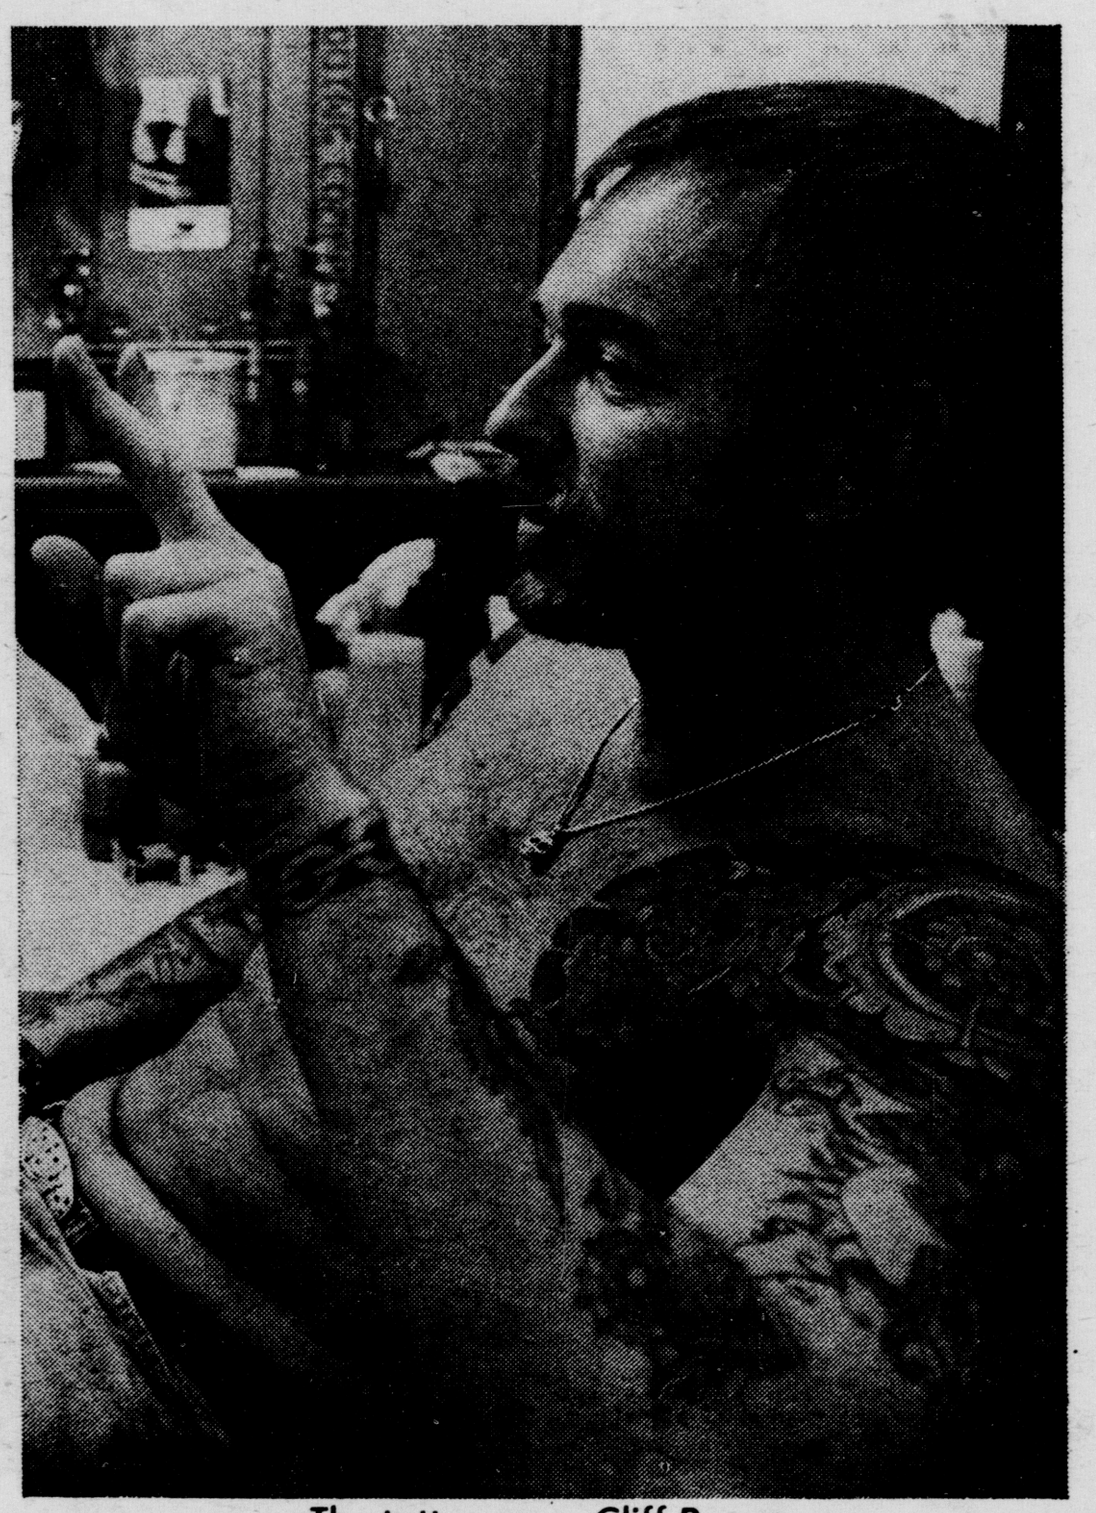

Markovich is getting a tattoo because his father has one from World War II. "It's with the heart and what not," he says. "You know, Mom." Sitting in a chair in front of a portable television because his girlfriend needed to watch "Day of Our Lives," he describes the needlework.

Old-car fever

Enthusiasts spend thousands, devote many hours to hobby of collecting and restoring antique autos

All the money, time and work mean even more when an antique-car buff and his car win the coveted honor: national first prize from the Antique Automobile Club of America.

by STEVE FORSYTH

Time stands still for antique car owners.

They live in yesterdays and dusty barns, trying to hang onto pieces of the past. They call it a hobby, but they admit it's more like an obsession.

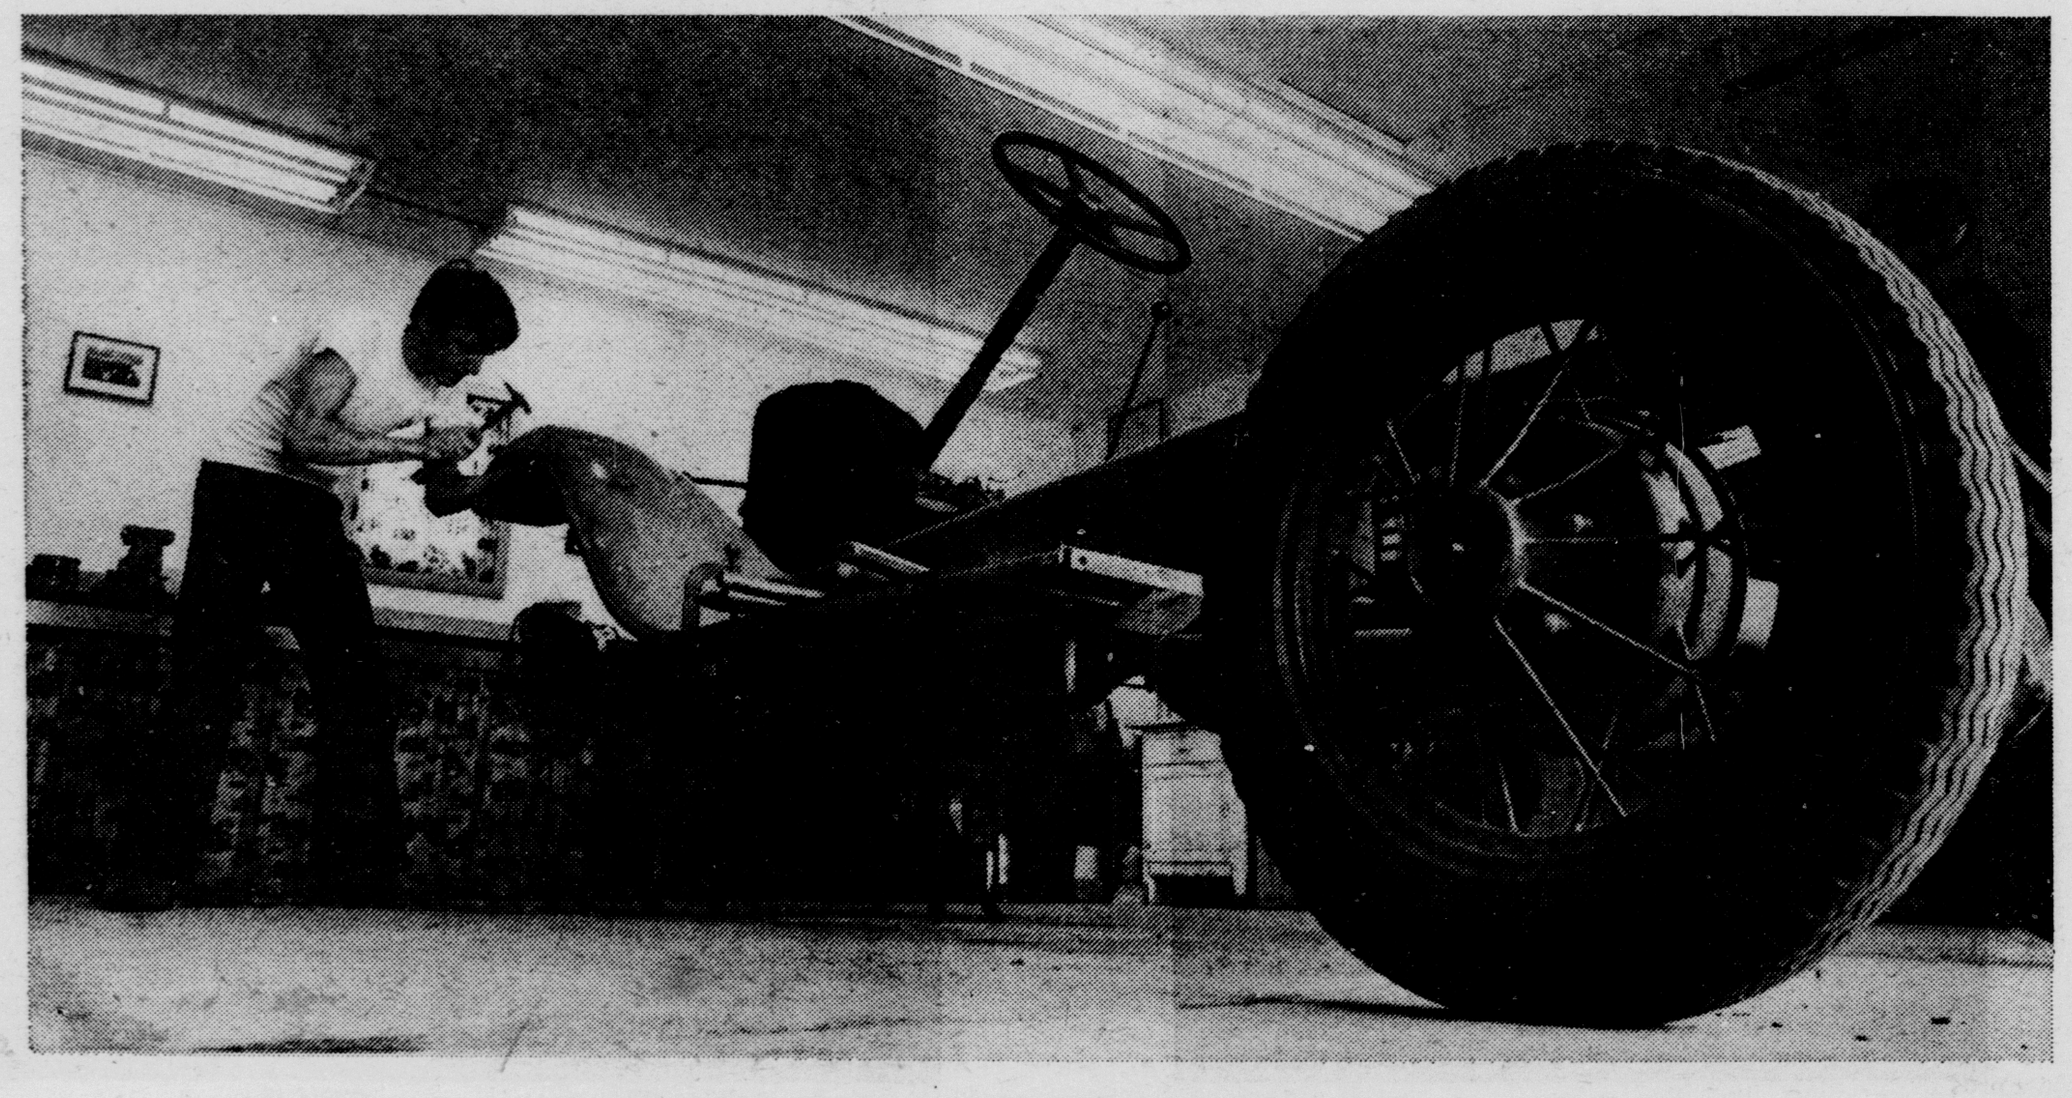

How far will a man go to get an authentic hubcap, radiator or door handle? How long will he labor to restore a dented, rusted fender to its original smooth finish? And how much will he pay to accomplish all this?

There are no answers to these questions. The limits are unknown.

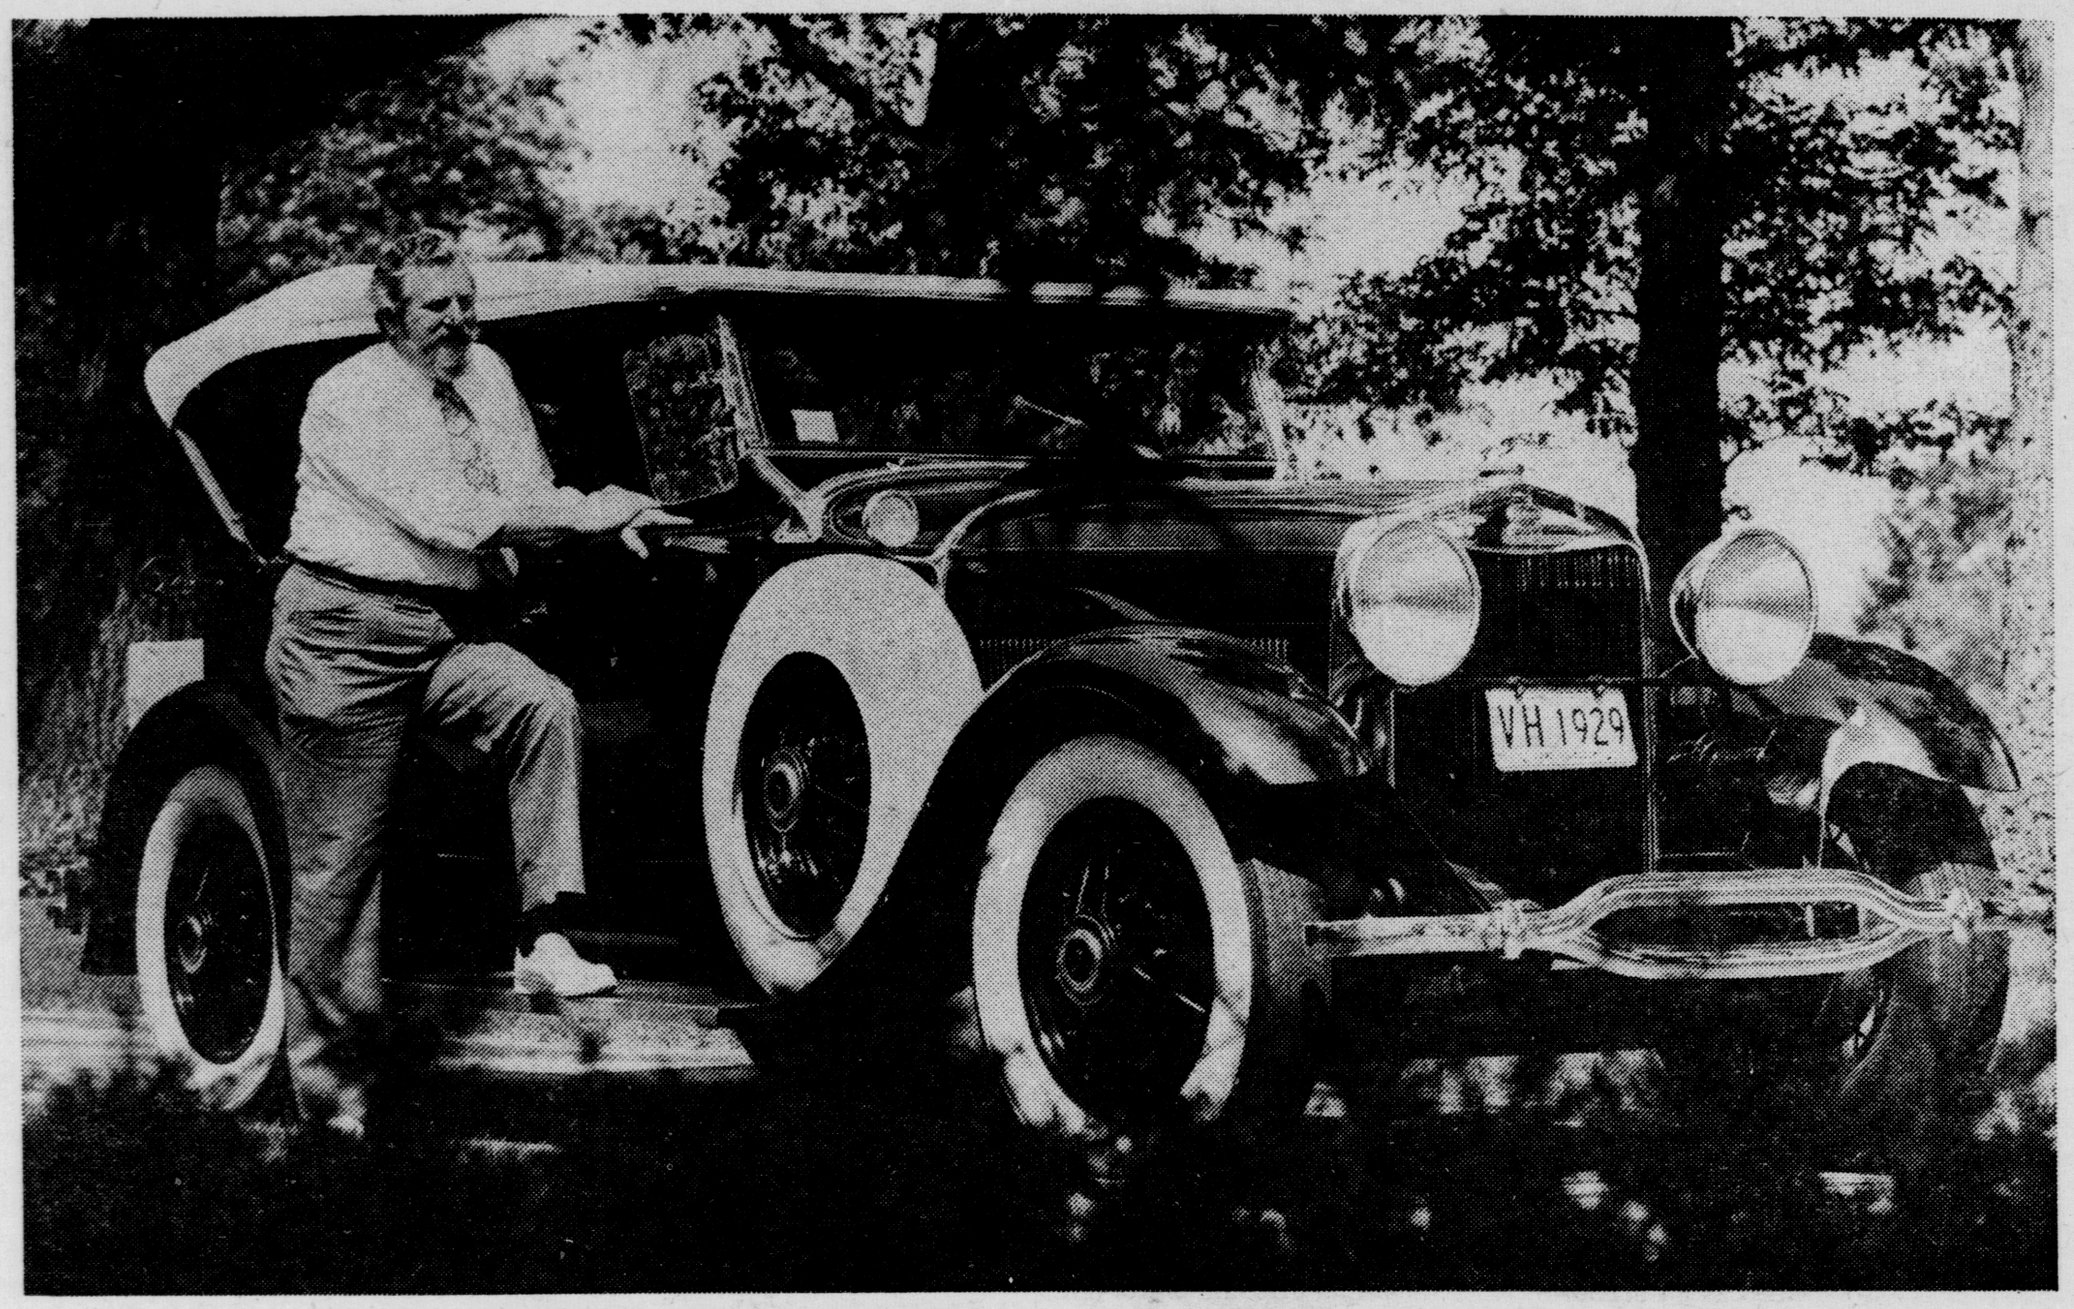

Antique and classic cars restored to original condition bear more resemblance to art works than to autos. In recent years, auctions have flourished and classic cars are bringing prices exceeding $150,000. The owners know the value of their vintage vehicles will increase with further age, and they do not fear investing in them because they know there can be no more.

Arlington Heights businessman Vern Hagenbring is immersed in the hobby. So are Arlington Heights residents Bob Hanselman and Ron Ehrenhofer. The Model "A" Restorers Club alone reports 250 members in the Chicago area, and the roster is growing.

Ehrenhofer says there are three reasons to get into the hobby. "Collecting the car is fun. The second thing is to rebuild it, and third, you can enjoy it, drive it and go to meets."

Ron Ehrenhofer hammers out a Ford fender.

Classic 1929 Lincoln Dual-cowl Phaeton is Vern Hagenbring's pride and joy.

OWNERS SUFFER as many frustrations as thrills in piecing together an antique. They get assistance through a widely circulated magazine, Hemmings Motor News, which reports more than 106,000 paid subscriptions. "That book is like the Bible," Hanselman says.

Hemmings contains almost 200 pages of information and listing of shows, parts swaps, cars and parts for sale, and manufacturers of replica parts (a last resort for the die-hards). Many subscribers pay extra to get their copies air mail, because a day or two can make a big difference in getting a part.

Having successfully haggled for a rusty, dusty body and chassis hidden in a garage somewhere, the owner must decide whether to attempt a restoration with original parts or settle for replicas. The difference can be significant in contest judging.

Hagenbring and Hanselman both have won top contests with their cars, but both enjoy driving them. "Either you want to show or you want to go," Hagenbring says. "I'd rather drive them."

SHOW CARS are inspected in every detail. Body flaws, oil leaks and improper materials will cost points, and a car that is driven regularly will not be able to keep up with an auto that is towed or carried on a trailer wherever it goes.

Cars that are driven can still be kept in excellent condition, however, and Hagenbring has a classic 1929 Lincoln Dual-cowl Phaeton that proves it.

Hanselman has among his five autos a unique 1929 Ford Model A Oval-window Business Coupe that is unbeaten in competition. He has since withdrawn it from most contests and does drive it, but most of his tooling around is done in one of his other old Fords or his 1921 Paige touring car.

Both men have collections in various stages of completion. They piece their autos together over a period of years, not months, and do not hurry in completing a particular model. The guideline is to get it right.

Car owners trade skills to get their vehicles finished. Some are good at painting, some at body work, and others are better with engines or upholstery. Hanselman said he did some car painting for a local accountant in return for some tax work.

RESTORATION is a large investment, and the prices on some parts would shock the uninitiated. How about $50 for a replica hubcap, or $125 for a 1932 Ford aluminum oil pan? Hemmings is packed with parts listings, many from persons who bought replacement parts from dealers. Most valued are the New Old Stock (NOS) pieces, which are original replacement parts that have never been used.

The other alternative for collectors is to make their own parts, but that process is painstaking and requires a model. Even the best restorers would be hard-pressed to make new parts if they did not have worn-out pieces from which to work.

The cost of getting into the antique car hobby is fast becoming prohibitive, and the present owners are unhappy about it. "It's cutting out a lot of good people," Hagenbring said. Cars bring high prices now even if they are in poor shape, with several missing parts, he said. "They can't be replaced. They're constantly going up, up, up."

"This used to be a hobby," Hanselman says, but the auctions started about three years ago and people started treating the cars like investments. "It has ruined it as a fun hobby."

Hanselman made an early start on his collection. At age 15 he bought a 1931 Model A Deluxe Tudor for $35. He restored that car a few years later and then came across his business coupe, which grew into a five-year project.

NOW HIS attentions have been turned to the Paige, a 1928 Ford Model A Phaeton, his 1934 V-8 and a 1940 Ford coupe.

It seems that one car is never enough for collectors. Hagenbring has six, Hanselman has five and Ehrenhofer has a variety sitting around his two garages, although he has succumbed to the lure of later models like the 1957 Chevy. They also share another problem — finding enough garage space.

Hagenbring's first car was the 1911 Knox, which he purchased for $500 in 1951. He got started on antique cars because he had tried other hobbies, such as hunting, golf and fishing, and wasn't satisfied. His hobby grew to a stable full of cars, and he has been offered as much as $32,000 for the little Knox.

Hagenbring refers to the car as "my Knox," and it has sentimental value now. He restored that one himself, and he remembers his hours of work. "I even took the engine apart and put it back together," he says.

He got into the Ford realm through a different route. Hagenbring recalls how much he wanted a new Ford in 1936, but his father wouldn't let him finance it and he had to wait until he had the full price. He ended up with a 1937 model, a cheap, closed car for $661. "I wanted a new car so bad I took the cheapest one they made. I painted on the whitewalls. When I got into the hobby, I said, 'someday I'm going to own a '36 Ford'."

Now, Hagenbring's pride and joy is the classic Lincoln, and he loves the looks he gets as he cruises in it.

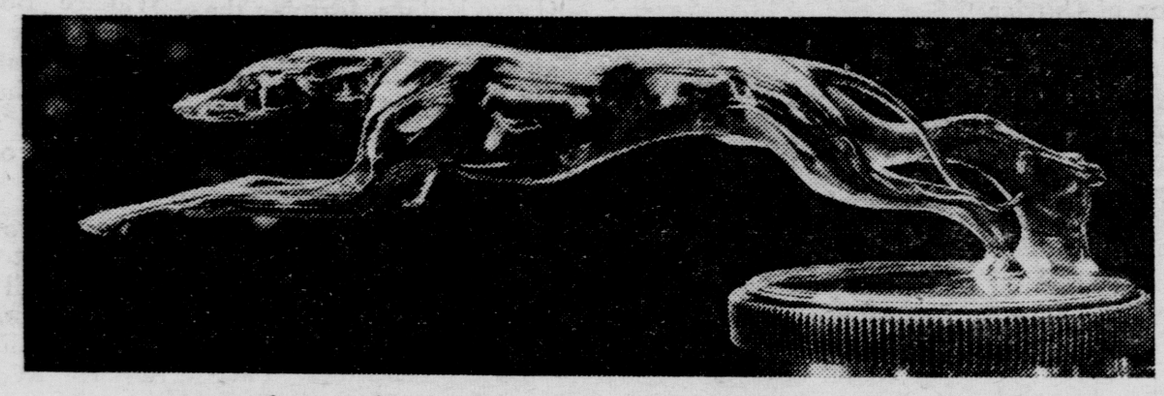

HANSELMAN became an active part of the community of Ford Model A owners and rose to president of the National Model A Restorers Club. He is now president of the Early V-8 Restorers Club.

He and his wife take weekend camping trips with other old car owners and travel each year to annual meetings at various cities.

The thousands of old cars in the United States fall into three categories — classics, antiques and special interest autos.

Classics are determined by the official car organizations, and usually include only autos of limited production. Custom-made bodies destined many of the old favorites for classic status, and Duesenbergs head the field.

Cars built no later than 1928 are official antiques, but models produced before World War II are generally respected, and Ford addicts have made their 1930s and 1940s cars highly prized possessions.

New entries into the car-collecting hobby might take the advice of Hagenbring and Hanselman. Both recommend Model A Fords if possible, partly because they are simple and easy to work on.

"I RECOMMEND someone buy a car all done," Hanselman said. "Spend the extra thousands of dollars. That car isn't going to depreciate." He explains that if you buy a rough one to restore, it could take three to four years, and costs go up rapidly if you have to pay to have the work done.

Hagenbring recommends a Model A, preferably a Roadster. "If you want to get into the hobby, spend a few dollars and buy an open car. It's worth three to four times more than a closed car," he says.

Car collectors find they have adopted a way of life, not just an old car, and their friends and associates have the same fervor. Families are also drawn into the hobby, and most collectors agree an understanding wife is an absolute requirement.

Car collectors form local and national clubs, but they may be hard to find if you don't know a member. The Ford owners have several clubs, including the two in which Hanselman is involved. There are Packard clubs, Duesenberg clubs, Classic car clubs and the over-all antique car associations. Newer models are represented by Corvette clubs, Thunderbird clubs and others.

If you want to get rich at the hobby, most owners will agree you are in it for the wrong reason. High prices are enticing, but the owners usually select cars they want to keep for certain reasons. The price of any restored car is uncertain and will depend on how much someone else will pay for it.

"It's only worth what it's worth to you," Hagenbring says.

Car hobby turns into business

Collecting antique autos can create a major storage problem, but J. J. Born solved it with his Chicago Historical Antique Auto Museum in north suburban Highland Park.

"It's a hobby that turned into a business," Born says. "Unlike collecting stamps or coins, you have to have a place to put these things."

He now stores about 100 autos, many from other owners' collections, and rotates them on the display floor which holds less than two dozen cars. The three-year-old facility is being enlarged, however, and will soon be able to display four times as many autos, Born says.

The cars are not just for show. "All of them are exercised regularly," Born says. "Part of the fun of having them is driving them."

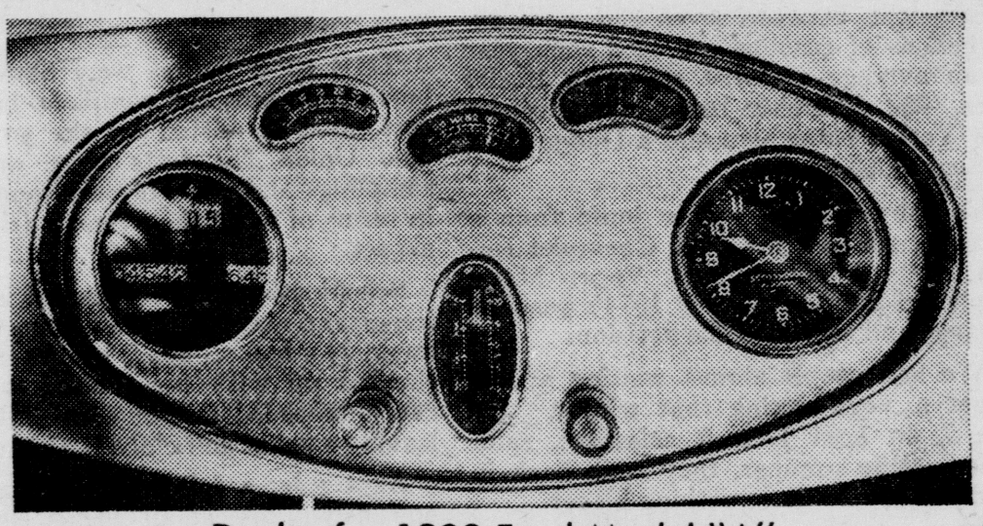

The museum presently features several antiques, classics and specialty cars, including the famous Batmobile. A sporty 1927 Essex boat-tail Speedster, a 1929 Duesenberg and a 1937 Cord with front-wheel drive are popular attractions.

ALSO ON DISPLAY is a 1929 Packard once owned by former Chicago Mayor "Big Bill" Thompson. The luxurious car is complete with a hidden booze compartment in the floor (after all, it was built during Prohibition).

"We're interested in virtually any kind of car: antiques, classics, personality cars," Born said. He charges owners to store their autos in his museum, but provides them a locator service for advertising agencies and movie makers who need old cars. "We furnished all the cars for "The Sting," Born said. The movie used 75 cars and trucks, and owners were paid for the use of their autos.

"All our cars have character," he said. The musuem roster carries such "character cars" as the Green Hornet's special car, a partially gold-plated Continental Mark III once owned by Elvis Presley and one of Evel Knievel's vehicles. The car in which the legendary Bonnie and Clyde were shot also has a prominent location.

The museum is open 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. seven days a week and offers free parking. Admission is $2 for adults and $1 for children, but group rates can be arranged by phoning 443-4400. It is located at 3160 Skokie Valley Rd. (Rte. 41).

Smaller car saves money on gasoline

by United Press International

Saving gasoline is a matter of choice.

The car you buy, the options you choose, the way you drive and care for the car will determine how many miles you squeeze out of a gallon of gasoline.

The most important decision will have to be made before you even start looking for a car. How much car do you really need?

Even the big cars are coming down in size. But remember that the heavier cars need bigger engines and generally use more gasoline.

It sounds elementary, but just think: are you willing to pay the cost of transporting a big trunk that is rarely filled or a big rear seat that isn't used except to carry a few packages?

FOR EVERY 100 pounds added to a car's weight, between seven and eight extra gallons of gasoline are used each year by an average motorist traveling 10,000 miles. The difference between a Chrysler New Yorker Brougham and a Dodge Dart is about 2,000 pounds.

It's not necessary yet to jump from a big car, such as a full-sized Chevrolet Impala, into a subcompact Vega. Many people did just that during 1974's gasoline shortage and regretted the decision.

"We had people almost waiting in line to get a Vega during that winter," Joe Girard, an East Detroit salesman, said. "Then, come summer, they were back in to trade them in on something bigger.

"Most of them decided the really small car was just not enough for them, but they didn't go all the way back to their big cars because they kind of liked the mileage they were getting."

The new mid-size cars the U. S. and foreign automakers are developing may be the answer for a lot of Americans. They maintain large interiors many people demand without the extra weight, mainly because the trunk areas are cut down and engines are smaller and lighter.

THE DIFFERENCE between a full-sized Ford with its standard 351-cubic inch V-8 and a Ford Granada with a standard 250-cubic-inch "six" is three miles per gallon on the highway, according to Environmental Protection Agency tests.

The difference between that big car and Ford's new Pinto MPG model with a 140-cubic-inch, four-cylinder engine is even more dramatic — 15 m.p.g. on the highway for the big Ford compared with 34 m.p.g. for the small Pinto.

At 60 cents a gallon, that's a big difference.

Once you'd decided what size car you really need, check fuel economy tests for the different cars within the size and weight class.

Many of the auto magazines run their own tests, as does Consumers Union, publishers of Consumer Reports, but the two main sources now are the EPA Gas Mileage Guide and Union Oil's Fuel Economy Test booklet.

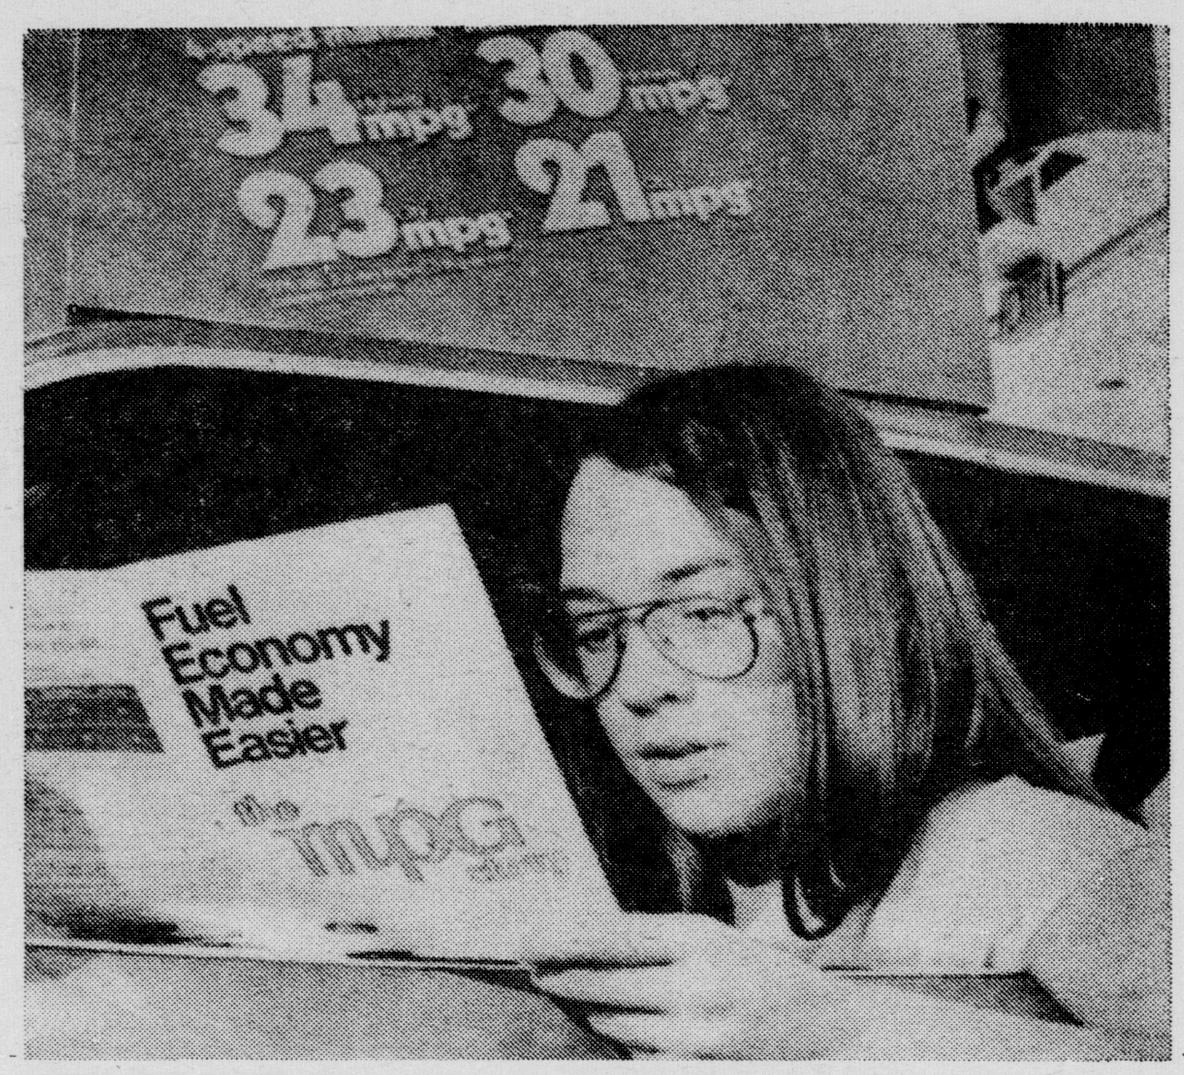

THE EPA figures were obtained in a laboratory but are complete because all cars must be tested by the government. The Union Oil tests were on-the-road samplings and probably are more realistic in terms of what the average driver might expect.

Selecting optional equipment is the next important decision. Don't expect to meet anybody's fuel economy results if you load the car up with fuel-robbing options or carry unneeded weight constantly — like leaving a set of golf clubs in the trunk.

As a rule, a full-sized car loaded with options will lose about 20 per cent in fuel economy.

Comfort and convenience accessories such as radios and heaters draw only small amounts of electric power and have little effect on fuel economy.

But accessories such as air-conditioning, used on a hot and very humid day and especially at low speeds, generally increase gas consumption by up to 8 or 9 per cent, perhaps a bit more. On a small car in heavy traffic on a hot summer day, the penalty may be as high as 20 per cent.

WITH THE PRICE of gasoline climbing almost daily, the fuel economy of the new models is one of the prime considerations in selection of an automobile.

Tattoos are the ultimate personal touch

"IT'S AN uncomfortable feeling, like when your arm falls asleep, the needles and all that." Later, another being tattooed — Dave Walker — likens the sensation to a thousand needles. Despite this and the sound resembling that of a dentist's drill, the tattooing process doesn't hurt.

A charcoal-coated stencil is placed on the shaved and washed arm. Sterilized needles are attached to the tattoo machine and are moved over the skin the same way one would write with a pen and paper.

When the tattoo is finished, a large bandage is put on to protect it. An instruction sheet explains how to care for the new tattoo, including washing and protecting it against water and sunlight. Shortly thereafter, the illustrated man may strut his stuff.

"If you're proud of it you should want to show it," says Markovich. "It's masculine," says Walker of his sitting eagle. Both men paid $50 for their tattoos, a common price.

TATOOS SEEM to add more than a bit of ink to the skin, says Raven. They often endow the wearer with a new-found set of past experiences and adventures that never happened. "The tattoo seems to make people run off at the mouth," he says.

Raven prefers to talk about the increasing respectability of tattoo wearers, though there still seems to be a stigma attached to those who sport them. The image of the tattoo wearer has negative connotations, of drunken sailors with naked ladies painted on their chests, or of truckdrivers with skull and crossbone on each arm.

"What's wrong with truckdrivers?" Raven asserts. "They're the backbone of society." He says of his clientele, "We're short on judges, psychiatrists and senators, those are the categories we are presently deficient. We don't get many bank presidents or whatever."

Famous people wear tattoos, says Raven. He has personally tattooed a cross to the upper arm of former Chicago Cubs pitcher Ferguson Jenkins, and applied tattos to the rock group, Aliota, Haynes and Jeramiah and Aliota's brother.

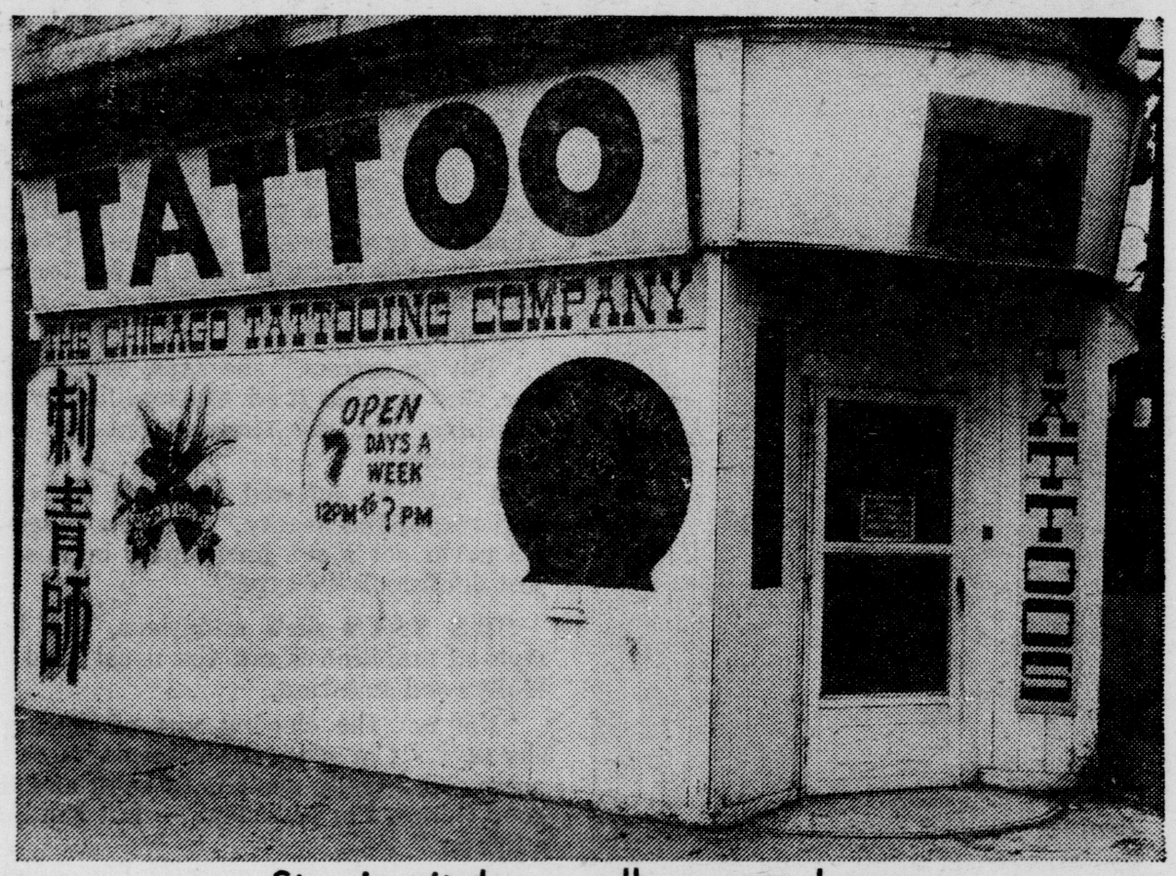

RAVEN, 42, found the work of a commercial artist boring and became interested in tattooing through a friend. A Hammond-born, Indiana University graduate with a degree in fine arts, Raven has a series of connecting tattoos running up and down both arms, with a chain bracelet on his left wrist. There is no limit to what a customer can get. He can get tattoos "until he has no skin left," he says.

The shop has a minimum fee of $20 for any tattoo. A flying eagle can cost up to $95; a large detailed ship for chest or back, $200; Leo the Lion, a Zodiac sign, $60; and Jesus on a Cross with added figures and background, $250.

Raven thinks tattooing will gain acceptability with the masses and shed its barbaric image. "The guy who takes six months to decide he wants a tattoo, then gets it, then is chastized by his boss, his wife, his mother, will be less prevalent," he says.

IT MAY take the feminist movement to persuade society the tattoo is worthwhile. More women are wearing tattoos, and if cigaret smoking and playing baseball is unladylike to some, you can be sure tattoo-wearing is much more appalling.

"I have mine in a private place for special people," emphasizes the heart-and-sun woman who drove in from South Bend for her tattoos. "Tattoos on ladies are extremely feminine. They're nicer than the nicest jewelry you can get."

Diane Keaton unusual — but likable — rising star

DIANE KEATON

HOLLYWOOD (NEA) — Diane Keaton, now starring in the movie "Love and Death," is confonding Hollywood. In the first place, they can't pigeon-hole her. And, in the second place, she doesn't behave like a normal almost-star should behave.

Consider that first place. Here is a girl who does a fine job in the two "Godfather" films, as Al Pacino's wife. OK. So you figure she's a good dramatic actress. Then she turns around and does all those Woody Allen pictures. And that automatically makes her a comedienne.

What is she?

"I'm an actress," she says, simply. To her, that explains it all. She's willing to try anything, but she realizes that she has limitations.

"I have no inflated views of my own importance and beauty," she says "I know I'll never get a sex image part because I just don't look the type."

SHE SAYS she's ambitious, but her style of ambition is not the usual kind of Hollywood ambition. . .

"I'm not the clawing sort of person," she says. "I'm more the dreaming sort, I guess. All I really want is to work and do good things. I'm persistent — but I'm not a fighter."

That, in itself, is very un-Hollywoodish. She is considered a strange girl here — strange but eminently likable — for several reasons.

First, she doesn't like to look at herself on the screen.

"I've never seen any of my pictures," she says. "I don't want to know how awful I am. And I won't do TV any more because of that.

"I made the mistake once of doing a Mannix, and I saw it and I hated both it and myself."

SHE HAS also stunned the studio publicity department by not demanding that she see every still photo taken. Most stars exercise that prerogative, examine every shot and gleefully draw large red Xs on the ones they feel unflattering and don't want let out. Diane Keaton could care less what shots are released.

At the moment, she's shooting a new comedy about love, marriage and divorce called "I Will, I Will . . . For Now," opposite Elliott Gould. It's another step upward for the red-haired actress.

Diane's a local girl, born and raised in Los Angeles, the eldest of four children.

"I ALWAYS wanted to perform," she says. "I guess what I was after was attention. All through junior high and high school, I did all those things — sang, danced, acted — and I'm ashamed of it now.

"Then I went to junior college in Santa Ana, but I only acted. I knew then what I wanted to do."

Her first professional work was with a U.S.O. tour of "Bye Bye, Birdie," and then she went to New York and studied at the Neighborhood Playhouse.

She still lives in New York, when she isn't making a movie somewhere. And she lately has gotton involved in a second career — photography. But the way things are going, she won't have much time for taking pictures — she'll be in them.

Glenview Navy League to sponsor rodeo

The Glenview Navy League will sponsor a rodeo at 2:30 p.m. Aug. 30 - Sept. 1 at the Glenview Naval Air Station. The event, sanctioned by the International Rodeo Assn. will feature the nation's best calf ropers, bull riders and steer wrestlers, along with a rodeo queen and naval plane exhibits.

Advance tickets for this year's rodeo are $3 for adults and $1.50 for children, with proceeds going to charities. In 1974 the Glenview rodeo drew more than 9,000 persons.

Tickets may be purchased at the Glenview State Bank, First Trust and Savings Bank, Chips Casuals, Rennackers Drugs and Ace Hardware, all in Glenview, or by calling 724-1111.

Trekkies' conclave to feature astronaut

A moon-walking astronaut will beam down with members of the Star Trek television cast to the Conrad Hilton Hotel, Chicago, for the Aug. 22-24 Star Trek & Science Fiction Spectacular.

The latest additions to the three-day affair, the first of its kind in Chicago, include astronaut Edwin "Buzz" Aldrin, who walked on the moon during a 1969 space mission and a director of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's recent Apollo-Soyuz rendezvous in space.

Aldrin will lecture on his real-life space adventures, while the NASA director will show photographs and films from the Apollo-Soyuz mission.

FURTHER fulfilling their mission to explore all reaches of the galaxy, the Star Trek personalities who will visit Chicago include William Shatner (Captain Kirk), Leonard Nimoy (Mr. Spock), DeForest Kelley, James Doohan, Michelle Nichols and George Takei.

There will be daily seminars and lectures conducted from a life-size replica of the bridge of the Starship Enterprise. Science fiction writers, such as Harlan Ellison, Philip Jose Farmer, Hal Clement, Robert Bloch and David Gerrold, also will gather on the bridge to talk about the Star Trek phenomenon and their own works. J. Allen Hynek, astronomy professor at Northwestern University and UFO expert, also will participate.

Trekkies who attend the convention will be treated to continuous showings of Star Trek episodes and science fiction films, an art exhibit and auction, the Andromeda Light Show and the Saturday night costume ball, a highlight of the convention.

Tickets are $20 for the whole weekend and may be obtained by mail from Star Trek Chicago, P.O. Box 8181, Chicago 60680.

An additional bonus for Trekkies will be special showings of Star Trek episodes next week on television. Channel 9, WGN, will present Star Trek episodes Monday, Tues, Wednesday and Friday at 7 p.m.

Siloam Springs State Park goes nostalgic Sept. 13-14

Siloam Springs State Park, once site of a famous health spa and popular resort, will offer nostalgic Gay Nineties activities Sept. 13-14 during the second annual Turn of the Century festival.

Rag-time music, wrestling matches, puppet shows, band concert, parade, horseshoe tourney, barbershop quartet singing, hot air balloon racing and an old-fashioned ice cream social are among the 1880-to-1920 diversions planned.

Also contributing to the Turn of the Century aura will be water fights between local fire departments, high-wheel bike riding, silent movie programs, pantomime shows featuring the renowned mime, T. Daniel; and craft demonstrations, including broommaking, blacksmithing, pewter casting and dulcimer construction.

Along with the horseshoe, wrestling, sculling and softball tourneys, there will be other games and contests of the period. An antique auto show and exhibit of other vintage vehicles is scheduled. Visitors also may purchase flowers from old-fashioned vending carts, or have their photos taken in Gay Nineties style.

The "Turn of The Century" celebration is part of the Dept. of Conservation "Illinois Heritage Days" program and is one of a dozen two-day weekends designed to recreate specific historic periods at state parks and memorials or to point up outstanding natural resource areas by ecological and recreational activities.

Siloam Springs State Park, south of Kellerville on the Adams-Brown County boundary, drew thousands of visitors between the mid-1880s and late 1920s. Its mineral-rich waters were thought to have great curative properties.

Activities begin at noon both days and continue until 6 p.m.

Cher's 'navel' wins in 'family' fight

HOLLYWOOD (UPI — Cher's belly button has been preserved for posterity and her weekly viewing audience, despite the crackdown on television's so-called "family hour."

Producer George Schlatter was adamant when CBS threatened to camouflage his star's navel.

Schlatter, the crusty, beefy individualist who produced "Laugh-In," refuses to be intimidated by television's ukase that the hour between 8 and 9 p.m. will be a pristine Disney-like family get-together.

"The networks have been bullied into their stance by politicians," Schlatter said. "They figure violence and sex are injurious to Americans. What is dull going to do to us? The family hour will bore the country to death.

"VIEWERS WILL be driven to committing more sex and violence. They'll be too bored to do anything but fight and fornicate.

"As for Cher's belly button, at her weight it's not sexy and there's no violence to it at all. I'm going to insure her navel against fire and theft. But collision insurance may be too expensive."

Schlatter grinned and stroked his Van Dyke beard malevolently. His humor is ever present, even when discussing elected officials.

"Politicians admit they don't watch the tube," he said. "They're out of touch with reality. Sex and violence are two distinct activities. The critics of both subjects haven't done enough research on either.

"It's easy for the guys in Washington to take cheap shots at TV. Let them take the same oath of truth, honesty and factual support that all TV commercials are required to provide.

"POLITICIANS WANT to control television because they know it is the most powerful medium for reaching the people.

"They dare call anything on TV immoral. I think raising the gas tax the day before the July 4 holiday is more immoral than seeing Cher's legs."

Schlatter sipped a glass of noonday wine and grimaced. He is genuinely distressed by the threat to free expression inherent in family hour regulations.

"They keep making up new rules about the family hour as they go along," he said. "The sex-violence umbrella is being used to knock down anything which may be a problem to the networks.

"I don't think the new regulations will affect our show as much as television in general which will be sterilized when the concept of 'family hour' is extended to all time slots. I'm afraid that's exactly what will happen.

"They use the term 'family.' Whose family? There is more sex, violence and deception on the 6 o'clock news than any entertainment show. I'd like to meet the family the politicians have in mind.

"THE REAL problem is the politicians are trying to be cops. The moral fiber of the country is being guarded by the most suspect group in the country this side of pickpockets — the guys in government.

"Television has a better reputation than they do. The credibility gap belongs to the politicians."

Schlatter said NBC has contacted him about resurrecting "Laugh-In" with new stars. The producer is reluctant to push the project.

"I'd be concerned about bringing 'Laugh-In' back," he said. "Even if it were slotted outside the family hour the show would be subject to the whims of people who are making up the rules.

"Who can you trust? The Federal Communication Commission says it has 300,000 letters from viewers complaining about too much sex and violence on TV. But no one has ever seen those letters."

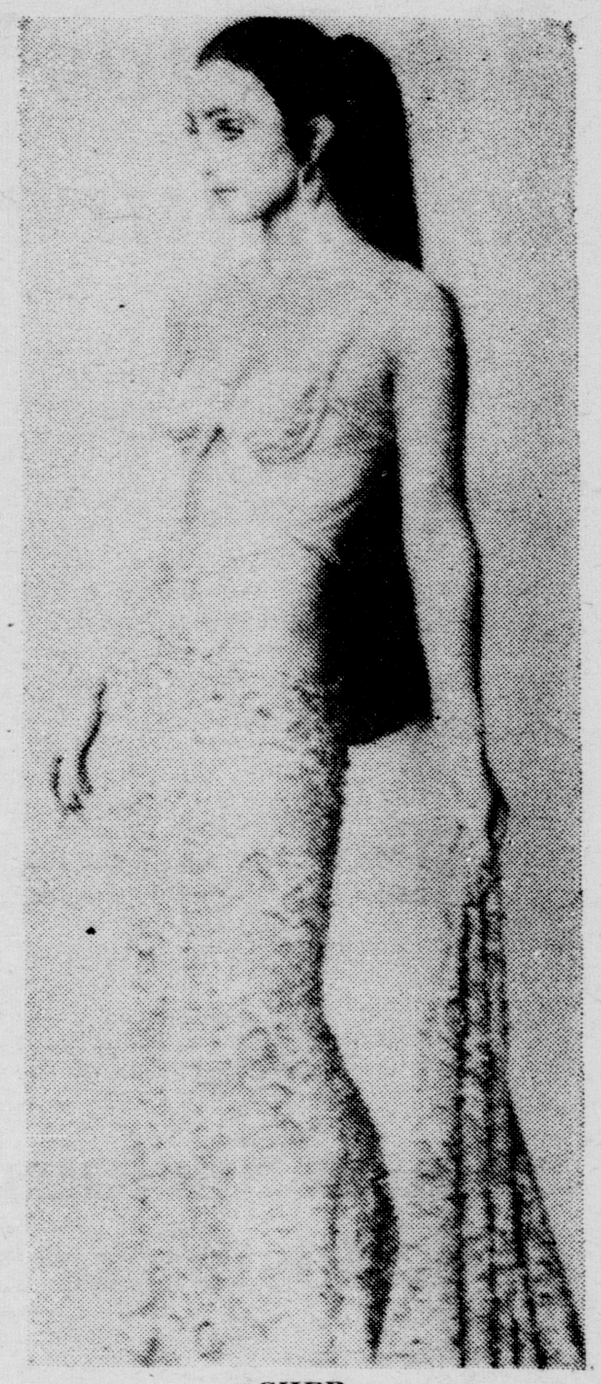

If Schlatter has his way there'd be a perpetual "family hour" for bureaucrats and congressmen.

'VALENTINO' STAR CHOSEN

Yvette Mimieux will star with Franco Nero in the two-hour television movie, "Valentino."

THREE TO PLAY KING DAVID

Timothy Bottoms, Keith Michel and Anthony Quayle will all play King David in "The Golden Age of Israel," a four-hour ABC-TV special.

Brewers' bid for CPB seat controversial

by United Press International

Millionaire brewer Joseph Coors believes his opponents are off base in criticizing his nomination by President Ford to the Corporation for Public Broadcasting because he is a conservative.

"I feel that I have the right, as an individual, to support any kind of organization or philosophy that I feel inclined to," Coors said. "As long as it's legal, it shouldn't be attacked."

Coors said critics were too concerned about his donations to conservative political groups, including one called the Committee for the Survival of a Free Congress.

"One person cannot in any way control that CPB board," Coors said. "I will be outspoken but there are 14 other members who can vote me down anytime they want to."

Coors, 57, is vice president of the Adolph Coors Co. of Golden, Colo., a brewery founded by his grandfather in 1873 to sell beer to gold camp miners. Family interests also include Television News, Inc., a national independent network.

Sen. John Pastore, D-R.I., chairman of the subcommittee which will hold confirmation hearings, predicted the nomination will run into trouble because of Coors' conservative views and his part ownership of TVN. Hearings are scheduled to begin Sept. 9.

'M*A*S*H' takes droll turn with Morgan

HARRY MORGAN

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Harry Morgan is a likable man, off screen and on. Perhaps that's why this season he's starring in his eighth television series.

His baggy eyes and lopsided grin have been a part of the tube since 1952 when he starred in "December Bride" with the late Spring Byington.

Beginning this fall he will be a regular in the "M-A-S-H" cast, replacing McLean Stevenson as commanding officer of that zany medical group.

Morgan has spent 15 of the past 22 years as a television fixture. Following "December Bride" he was a regular in "Pete and Gladys," "Kentucky Jones," "The Richard Boone Show," "Dragnet," "The D.A." and "Doc Ramsey."

Morgan is low key. He exudes warmth and dry humor. His soft sell, unobtrusive quality probably is the reason he holds the record for most series as a star performer.

HIS CO-STARS customarily grabbed most of the attention - Miss Byington, Dennis Weaver, Boone and Jack Webb.

He replaced Ben Alexander as Sgt. Friday's sidekick when "Dragnet" was exhumed 10 years ago. Now, however, Morgan faces the most difficult assignment of his career — taking over for Stevenson in "M-A-S-H."

The popular CBS series also will replace Wayne Trapper (John Rogers), who departed following a contract dispute this summer.

"I'm a big fan of the show," Morgan said during a shooting break in the sixth episode. "I'll miss McLean and Wayne.

"When they killed off McLean last year the producers still hadn't found a replacement for him. When I accepted the role of Col. Sherman Potter I didn't know that Wayne wouldn't be back either.

"The way the show is going I don't know if they'll be missed. Maybe the audience will see things differently."

MORGAN CANNOT explain his durable popularity with viewers. He's simply grateful for it.

"All my roles in comedy and dramatic shows have been easy, old shoe characters," he said. "But I've never been type cast.

"Also, the people I play have been pretty much like me. My favorite was Pete in 'Pete and Gladys' because I just played myself."

Until now Morgan has found it easy to slip into his characterizations. But he's having trouble fitting himself inside of the skin of Col. Potter.

He is, after all, the new kid on the block in "M-A-S-H." Alan Alda, Loretta Switt, Larry Linville and Gary Burghoff have had three years to get comfortable in their parts. And the shadow of McLean Stevenson hangs over Morgan.

"Being chief surgeon is all Col. Potter has in common with Col. Blake, the character McLean played," Morgan said. "I wanted to keep that fishhook hat he wore, but McLean took it with him.

"SO FAR I'VE had to play the part pretty straight. I'd like to make the colonel a little more wacky. It's taking me time to find the right niche for this guy. But things will fall into place.

"Everyone has gone out of his way to make me feel a part of the 'M-A-S-H' family. In my experience each series develops a strong family feeling. It's one of the nice things about working in a weekly show.

"Even before Gene Reynolds and Larry Gelbart (the show's producers) approached me I said if I had my choice of any series on the air it would be 'M-A-S-H.'

"I prefer comedy to drama. It comes more naturally to me. The good thing about this show is the sardonic, cynical humor. It's not typical fluffy situation comedy.

"During the years when I wasn't in a series I played a lot of guest roles and appeared in movies. But I like doing a weekly series because there's some place to go every day. An actor can go crazy with too much free time.

"When you join a show like this one, you always have something to look forward to."

Elizabeth Montgomery

Please settle an argument. My mother says the woman that does the Palmolive commercials is Elizabeth Montgomery. I say it isn't. Who's right?

K.D.

You are. We don't know the actress who does those commercials, but she is NOT Elizabeth Montgomery.

* * *

I would like you to settle a little disagreement between my brother and myself. Is the dog that played in the movie "Benji" the same dog that's on "Petticoat Junction"? I say it's the same dog and my brother says it's not. Please tell me who is correct?

T.P.

You are. The dog that played in "Benji and "Petticoat Junction" was discovered by his owner, Frank Inn, some 16 yeaars ago in Burbank, California. The dog's real name is Higgins and he's now retired in Sun Valley. He probably deserves it because in "people years" he is 112 years old.

* * *

Who was the first and who was the longest player of Darrin Stevens on "Bewitched"? Dick York or Dick Sargeant?

J.R.L.

Dick York was the first actor to play that part and he also starred on the series longer than Dick Sargeant.

When did the TV series "The Monkees" run? A.B.

That show ran from 1966-68.

'Rookies' and 'S.W.A.T.' team to rescue trapped tenants

In a special two-hour presentation titled "The Rookies/S.W.A.T. Special," rookies Terry Webster, Mike Danko and Chris Owens are assigned to temporary duty under Lt. Hondo Harrelson (Steve Forrest), leader of a special unit skilled in the use of special weapons and tactics (S.W.A.T.) on ABC, Saturday, August 16.

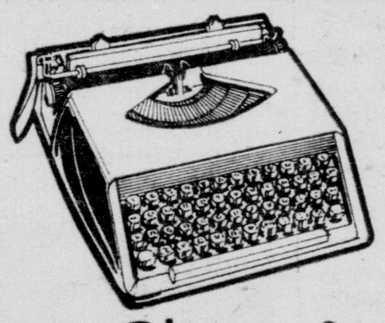

Sam Melville

In "The Rookies/S.W.A.T. Special," shortly after watching Hondo and his men save a woman from her deeply disturbed husband, who is armed, the rookies are ordered by Lt. Ryker to report to Lt. Harrelson, known in the division as Hondo. After a period of rigorous training, Terry, Mike and Chris join one of several five-man S.W.A.T. teams called out to rescue the wealthy tenants of an apartment building. The complex has been seized by an armed gang led by Larry Neal, a desperate criminal

Steve Forrest

Georg Stanford Brown stars as Terry Webster, Sam Melville as Mike Danko, Bruce Fairbairn as Chris Owens, Gerald S. O'Loughlin as Lt. Eddie Ryker and Kate Jackson as Jill Danko.

No longer a Polish joke, Vinton's star takes off

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — It's a Polish world for Bobby Vinton, who is making a whirlwind comback thanks to the fast fading Polish joke craze.

Vinton was washed up a year ago, over the hill. Epic Records dropped his contract after a dozen years and some $30 million in record sales. The Las Vegas Flamingo uncoupled him too.

Bobby, in fact, was something of a Polish joke himself. Give a Polish singer the key to success and watch him open the door to the poorhouse.

"I had to do something," he said. "I decided to write and sing a Polish song and get the Polish people behind me. If all 13 million Poles in this country bought my record I'd be in great shape."

BOBBY WROTE "My Melody of Love," of which "Moja droga ja cie kocham" (My dear, I love you) is part of the Polish lyrics. But nobody would finance the recording.

With $50,000 of his own money Vinton rented a studio, hired musicians and cut a single of his song along with an album.

"Seven major companies refused to produce and distribute the record," Vinton said. "They laughed at the idea of a Polish record.

"Finally ABC Records gave me a chance. So far 'My Melody of Love' has sold 2 million copies and it earned a gold album the first week.

"It was more than a hit record. It was a happening. It gave the Poles a sense of pride and spirit. It was something they were waiting for."

The song also has been a happening for Vinton. He is booked solid for the entire year. He has a long-term contract with ABC, a new syndicated television show coming this fall and a $1 million contract with Las Vegas' Riviera.

VINTON SEES his good fortune as a triumph for American Poles.

"I grew up in the Polish area of Canonsburg, Pa.," he said. "I went to a Polish school and a Polish church. To me the whole world was Polish until I went to high school, where I had a polka band.

"Polish jokes didn't come up until long after I was a successful singer. I was used to the ethnic humor of show business. I didn't think the jokes were so bad. At least the Poles were being recognized, if only negatively.

"But Poles were very upset. They suffered from the name-calling and being held back in their jobs.

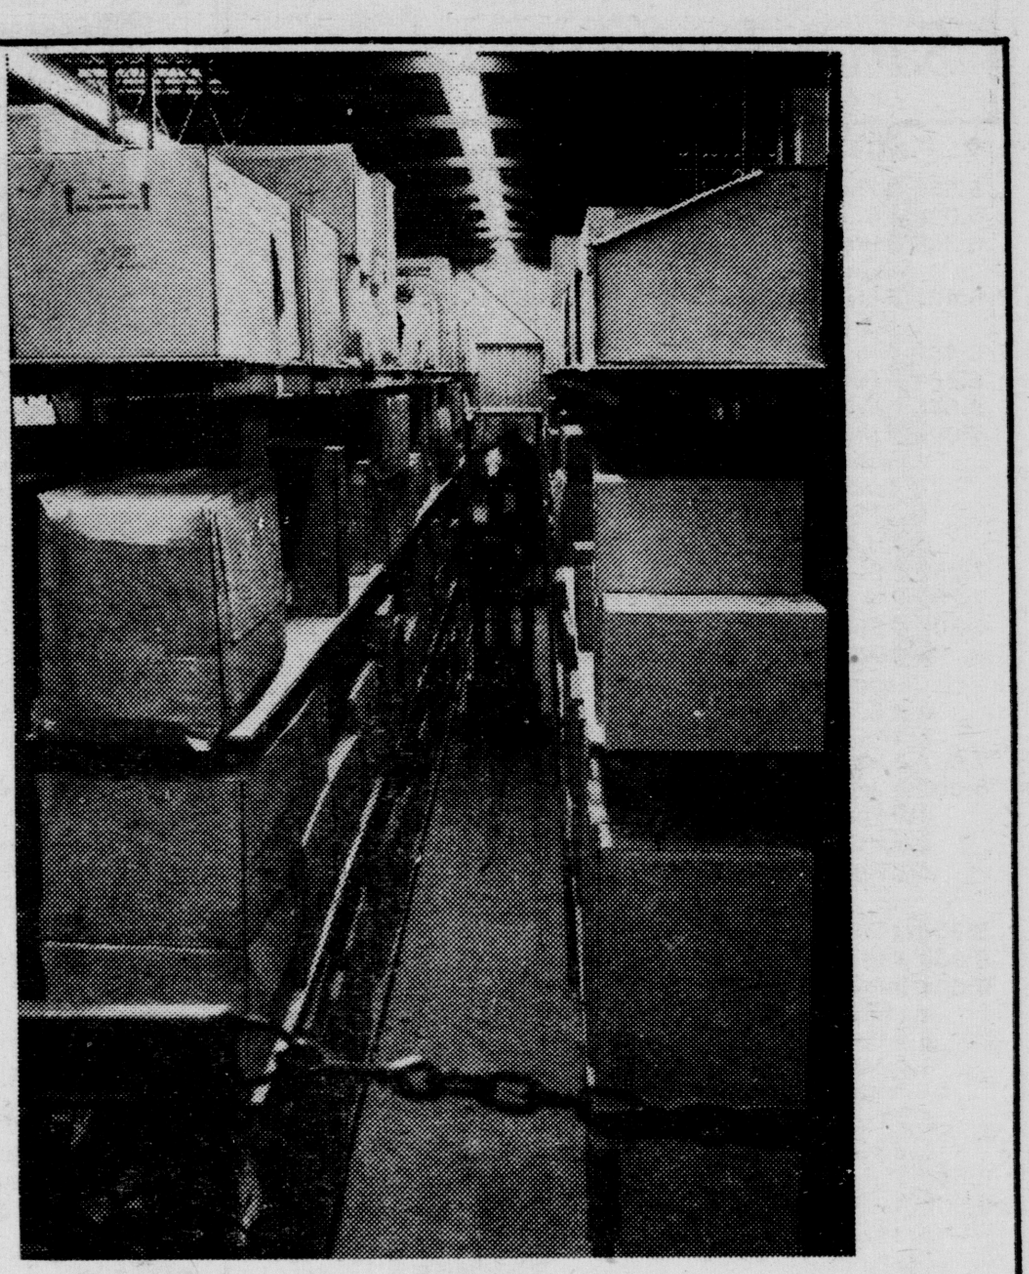

"When my record came out Polish people bought it. They show up by the thousands for my personal appearances. Timing had a lot to do with it all."

Last week Bobby played to 10,000 persons in Cleveland. He asks the Poles in his audiences to hold up their hands. A forest of waving arms responds.

He inserts Polish references in many of his lyrics. Appreciative fans bring him Polish sausages, wines and flags.

LAST JUNE the Polish embassy held a ball in Bobby's honor. The Polish government has invited him to tour the land of his forebears.

"I had no idea how many Polish people lived in this country," Bobby said. "I think my record and this attention is great for all nationalities. My music is for all people who should be proud of their heritage."

Shelby Lyman on chess

More on grandmaster Paul Keres

The chess world, saddened by the loss of Estonian grandmaster Paul Keres, has been pouring forth its tribute to him.

One of the most informative and apt statements has been the following by grandmaster Robert Byrne:

"Unlike more than a few of his colleagues he played for the joy of exercising his marvelous imagination in tactical combinations. He deciried the current tendency to win at all costs if that meant stooping to dull tenacity. Often he did not want to stop his analysis of adjourned positions even after proving that he had an iron-clad victory — his seconds complained that he would keep them up all night demonstrating beautiful alternative winning continuations that came spinning out of his amazing inventiveness over and beyond any practical need."

These comments attest to Keres' great love for chess. And this passion, which caused him as a youngster to begin his own written collection of every game he played or saw played, has always characterized his play.

Such an active and creative spirit toward the game made this exceptional talent a formidable adversary.

Proof of his strength was his record against the 10 of the 12 modern holders of the world championship title he was privileged to play. He scored at least one win against nine out of the 10 he played. (Anatoly Karpov, the current champion, drew his only two games with Keres.)

A good example of Paul's potency was the conclusion of one of his games with Alexander Alekhine. In Diagram 1 probably distracted by the original and aggressive play of his opponent, the world champion blundered. He played 1. . . . Q-N5 and Keres, of course, answered with 2. QxB check, which encouraged resignation. (After 2. . . . RxQ, 3. R-K8 check would have forced mate.)

That game was played in 1937! Eighteen years later Keres downed Botvinnik from our second diagrammed position. We see the position in Diagram 2 after he has played 1. N-B2! The threat is 2. P-B4, N-B3; 3. B-K6 check, K-B3; and 4. N-N4 mate. Botvinnik tried 1 . . . P-KN4, but after the obvious 2. PxP E.P., he resigned. (Either recapture of the pawn would lose a piece.)

Our last example, which brings us to 1965, features Boris Spassky as the loser in Diagram 3.

Here Keres played 1. R-B2! and the threat of 2. B-B1 caused resignation.

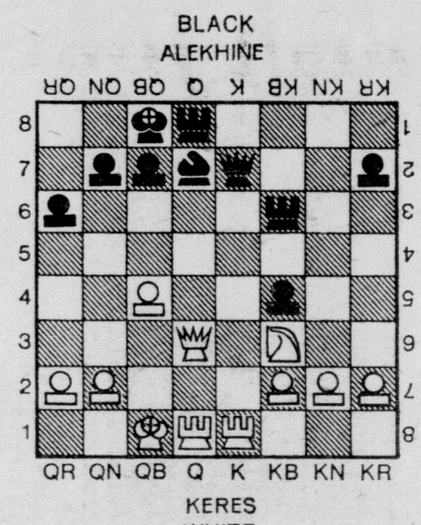

This finish culminated a beautiful and sustained effort by Keres, as the game score shows. Paul, in exchange for two pawns (which Spassky won in a spirited manner) artfully combined pressure on the black king position with a final encroachment on the overextended black queen.

You will probably see many of Keres' games in the near future. In all of them you will surely see chess come vibrantly alive.

Win at bridge

by Oswald and James Jacoby

Big swindle involves high stakes

The last hand in Victor Mollo's book is another real old timer. Not that it has appeared regularly in bridge columns, but rather that the swindle he discusses has been worked several times in tough competition.

North's bidding is only bad from the standpoint of potential result. He certainly can't imagine that South won't have a play for the spade slam, after South shows spades in response to North's Stayman three clubs.

Anyway, here is poor South, flying blind in a fog with all motors conked out. He has to lose a trick to the ace of diamonds and there is no legitimate way to avoid the loss of a spade trick.

Then what should South do? Just what the late Willard Karn did in a rubber bridge game some 45 years ago. He won the second trick, turned to West and said, "You wouldn't lead an ace unless you expect to take a trump trick." Then Willard slapped down the queen of spades; West played low and the impossible slam came home.

Colonists loved sports—but Indians were champs

by United Press International

The men who fought in the American Revolution two centuries ago were acquainted with a variety of sports, including rudimentary forms of tennis and golf.

A Bicentennial survey of Colonial athletic pastimes shows that team sports were almost nonexistent.

In New England, the dour Calvinist creed made any form of recreation or pastime virtually unlawful. In the New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Delaware areas, the predominantly Dutch and German settlements enjoyed sociable play such as bowling, ice skating and cricket. In the southern colonies, sports were a full-time way of life devoted to horse racing, fox hunting and cockfighting.

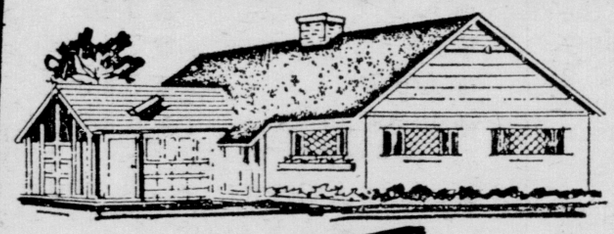

On the wilderness frontier, however, the sports were savage. A popular pastime throughout the Ohio Valley was known as gouging. The rules for these wild wrestling bouts allowed kicking, biting, kneeing and maiming. But the most proficient athletes on the new continent were the Indians. They swam and raced their canoes. They enjoyed jumping contests and marathon races. They competed with the bows and arrows and in wrestling. They played team games such as field hockey and lacrosse.

On June 4, 1763, at Fort Michillmackinac in Michigan territory, two teams of Indians approached the outpost at what is now Mackinaw City and began playing lacrosse. The soldiers were enticed outside by the game and sentries left their posts to watch.

With the fort unmanned, the Indians snatched weapons from under blankets held by their squaws and massacred the entire garrison.
